Dr. Julie Stierwalt

Julie A.G. Stierwalt, Ph.D. is a Senior Associate Consultant in the Division of Speech Pathology, Department of Neurology at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester Minnesota, where she serves as a consultant for individuals presenting with a wide range of speech, language and cognitive disturbance. Prior to her work at Mayo, she was in academia for 19 years where she taught courses in dysphagia, motor speech disorders, acquired communication disorders, structural-based communication disorders, and medical speech pathology. Dr. Stierwalt received her B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Northern Iowa, and her Ph.D. from the University of Iowa. She has numerous journal publications, chapters, and a co-authored textbook titled Brain-Based Communication Disorders. In 2009 ASHA recognized Dr. Stierwalt’s contributions to the field with Fellow status.

Edna Babbitt

Edna M. Babbitt, M.Ed., CCC-SLP, Board Certified – ANCDS, is currently a PhD candidate at the University of Queensland, Brisbane, Australia. She has worked in clinical research at the Center for Aphasia Research & Treatment at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago since 2000. Her clinical and research interests include intensive aphasia treatment, fMRI, and computer-based treatments. She received training in Supported Conversation for Adults with Aphasia© from the Aphasia Institute of Toronto in 2010.

Dr. Lisa Vinney

Lisa Vinney is an Assistant Professor in the Communication Sciences and Disorders Department at Illinois State University in Normal, Illinois. She holds a bachelor’s degree in psychology and communication sciences and disorders from Northwestern University and a master’s degree in speech-language pathology and doctoral degree in communication sciences and disorders from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Her research interests are primarily focused on how the capacity to self-regulate vocal behavior is affected by environmental, personality, cognitive, and task variables in individuals with and without voice disorders. Dr. Vinney’s clinical and teaching background and interests are focused on medical speech-language pathology with a specific focus on voice and voice disorders.

Dr. Carlin Hageman

Carlin Hageman is Professor Emeritus at the University of Northern Iowa and an ASHA Fellow. He has received the State of Iowa’s Regent’s Scholar Award and was awarded Honors of the Iowa Speech-Language and Hearing Association and the National Speech-Language and Hearing Association. He served as the Executive Director and National Advisor for the National Student Speech-Language and Hearing Association and most recently served on the ASHA Board of Directors. Dr. Hageman’s most recent publication is Chapter 12 “Motor Learning Guided Therapy” in K. Bliele’s The Late Eight (2nd Edition).

Dave Krupke

Dave Krupke earned B.S. and M.A. degrees from Western Illinois University. His 45 year SLP career has included public school service, clinical supervision at Augustana College and the University of Iowa, and his current position as a Clinical Assistant Professor in the Master of Speech-Language Pathology Program at St. Ambrose University.

Mr. Krupke has presented at local, state, regional, national and international conferences and conventions, and has published articles in state and national journals. Mr. Krupke is a Resource Specialist/Trainer for See the Sound/Visual Phonics (STS/VP) and is Director of Research for the non-profit organization that licenses STS/VP trainers. He is currently involved in a multi-year research project at St. Ambrose University designed to explore the efficacy of See the Sound/Visual Phonics training and implementation.

Mr. Krupke is a Life Member of ISHA, has received Honors of the Association, and was a recipient of the ASHA State Volunteer Award in 2003.

Dr. Victoria Tumanova

Victoria Tumanova, Ph.D. CF-SLP is an assistant professor in the Communication Disorders and Sciences Department at Syracuse University. She completed her doctoral training at the University of Iowa and postdoctoral training at Vanderbilt University before joining the department of Communication Sciences and Disorders at Syracuse University in 2013.

Dr. Tumanova’s clinical and research interests are in the area of developmental stuttering. Her research is focused on the role of temperament, linguistic and speech motor control abilities in the development of stuttering in young children. The purpose of the current work in the Stuttering Research laboratory is to study how preschool-age children react to speech errors and disfluencies in their own speech and whether differences exist between children who do and do not stutter. We use psychophysiology measures such as skin conductance and heart rate variability to explore children’s reactions during different language related stressors as well as a motion capture system to assess children’s speech motor control abilities. Several studies have shown that children who stutter are more reactive and less able to regulate their reactivity and attention than normally fluent children, the work in our lab is focused on uncovering how these differences in emotional reactivity and regulation may affect speech production and specifically speech fluency in these children.

Dr. Tumanova has presented her work at national and international conferences and published in peer-reviewed journals.

Dr. Heather Balog

Heather Balog earned her B.A. in Communication Sciences and Disorders (1994) and her M.A. in Speech-Language Pathology (1996) from the University of Northern Iowa. She worked clinically in a rehabilitation setting for several years before returning to school. She earned her Ph.D. from Purdue University (2004) where her research interests focused on speech and language development and disorders in young children. Her area research interests include phonology (both segmental and supra-segmental), pragmatic language acquisition, vocabulary and emergent literacy development in preschoolers, and assessment of at risk populations. She currently works full-time in her private practice in Plymouth, MI. She has recently served as President for the Michigan Speech-Language-Hearing Association (MSHA), and she currently serves on the Michigan Speech-Language-Hearing Foundation Board. She remains active with her state association and recently chaired an ad hoc committee researching the guidelines for support personnel in the state of Michigan for MSHA.

Dr. Sean Readmond

Professor Sean Redmond received his Ph.D. from the University of Kansas in 1998 and joined the faculty at the University of Utah shortly thereafter. He has several peer-reviewed publications as well as book chapters on the topic of language impairments and their social concomitants. His scholarship has been funded by the National Institutes of Health. He is the current editor for JSLHR-L and has served as associate editor for JSLHR and LSHSS.
