IOWA CONFERENCE ON COMMUNICATIVE DISORDERS

University of Northern Iowa
April 7–8, 2011

The Iowa Conference on Communicative Disorders and Iowa Speech-Language-Hearing Association cooperate to provide continuing education activities in speech-language pathology and audiology that are acceptable to the State of Iowa and the American Speech-Language and Hearing Association. This program is offered for 12 Iowa CEU hours or 1.2 ASHA CEU hours (various level; professional area). ICCD and ISHA approval does not imply endorsement of course content, specific products or clinical procedures.

The Iowa Conference on Communicative Disorders is a student-run conference for professionals. The conference is on its 20th year and CEUs, ASHA or Iowa, are available. Sessions for each day include topics pertaining to either adult/neurogenic or child/school.

The conference chairs are Kaitlyn Petersen and Rebekah Rickels. Dr. Carlin Hageman is the conference director.

HEATHER L. BALOG, Ph.D., CCC-SLP, earned her B.A. in Communication Sciences and Disorders (1994) and her M.A. in Speech-Language Pathology (1996) from the University of Northern Iowa. She earned her Ph.D. from Purdue University (2004). Her research interests include phonology (both segmental and suprasegmental), pragmatic language acquisition, vocabulary and emergent literacy development in preschoolers and assessment of at risk populations. Her most recent research has been focused on determining evidence based practice standards for screening and diagnosing speech and language impairment in low-socioeconomic and minority preschoolers.

CARLIN HAGEMAN, Ph.D., is a professor and the head of the Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders at the University of Northern Iowa (UNI). He has served as the Executive Director of NSSLHA since 2004. Dr. Hageman, an Iowa Regents Scholar 2004-2005, is currently serving as President of ISHA. His publications and presentations are in the areas of dysphagia, aphasia, motor speech disorders, perception of accented speech and the application of motor learning principles to therapy or speech disorders.

JOY HESSE, M.A., CCC-SLP, is a practicing speech-language pathologist at ENT Clinic of Iowa, P.C., in West Des Moines. She is a graduate of the University of Northern Iowa. Ms. Hesse has worked in acute care, outpatient rehabilitation and presently a private office setting. For the past 13 years, she has specialized in evaluation and treatment of voice problems, head and neck cancer, dysphagia, and pediatric and adult airway. Hesse lectures regularly in the Midwest on voice disorders and has lectured nationally at ASHA on the efficacy of the FEESST examination.

ANGELA HOTH, Pharm.D., is currently a Clinical Pharmacy Specialist at the Iowa City VA Medical Center, adjunct faculty at the University of Iowa College of Pharmacy and a Clinical Pharmacy consultant on community projects to enhance mental health care in the primary care setting for aging Iowans. She received her B.S. Pharmacy from the University of Iowa, Pharm.D. at the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio and completed a residency in Ambulatory Care & Geriatrics at the Audie L. Murphy VA Medical Center in San Antonio, Texas. Working with an aging population in the community, long-term care settings and the VA has provided Dr. Hoth with broad-based experiences in identifying, resolving and preventing medication-related problems in adults.

LEONARD LAPOINTE, Ph.D., CCC-SLP, received his B.A. in 1961 from Michigan State University, M.A. in Speech Pathology and Audiology in 1966 and Ph.D. in Communication Sciences and Disorders from the University of Colorado at Boulder in 1969. Dr. LaPointe is currently the Francis Eppes Professor in the School of Communication Science and Disorders at Florida State University. His teaching interests include neuroanatomy and neurophysiology, neuropathology, neurogenic disorders of communication and cognition and research design in neurogenic disorders. His research interests include memory, attention and cognitive disorders, neuromotor speech disorders, aphasia, right hemisphere syndrome, dementia, traumatic brain injury, role of subcortical structures in language and cognition, dystonia, Parkinson's Disease and other movement disorders. Dr. LaPointe is also the author of many distinguished text books in the field of speech-language pathology.

LINDSEY LEACOX, M.A., CCC-SLP, earned her B.A. in Communication Sciences and Disorders (2006) and her M.A. in Speech-Language Pathology (2008) from the University of Northern Iowa. She is a doctoral ABD candidate in Speech Language Pathology at Florida State University. Her clinical and research interests are with young bilingual children, particularly Spanish-speaking. She is interested in examining assessment and intervention resources for children from culturally and linguistically-diverse backgrounds, especially literacy. Her work experience includes primarily working with preschool and school-age children, as well as assisting with FSU's bilingual assessment team. The Sunshine State has treated her well, but she is excited to hopefully be moving back to the Midwest by the end of the year.

BILL MURPHY, M.A., CCC-SLP, is alumnus of CSD at the University of Northern Iowa 1972, and is a clinical professor at Purdue University. He has worked for over 30 years with children and adults who stutter. Murphy is a member of both the National Stuttering Association and Friends of Children and Adolescents Who Stutter. He is a past member of the Steering Committee of ASHA's Special Interest Division of Fluency and Fluency Disorders and is recognized as a Fluency Specialist. Murphy is also an ASHA Fellow. He has given numerous state and national presentations regarding the treatment of stuttering. Murphy believes that successful stuttering therapy incorporates both the modification of speech behavior as well as emotional and attitudinal changes.

ROBERT WARNER, D.O., is currently an otolaryngologist at the ENT Clinic of Iowa in West Des Moines. He received his B.A. at Temple University, his Doctor of Osteopathy at Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine and completed his residency at the hospital of The Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine, Otolaryngology and Facial Plastic Surgery. Dr. Warner's scope of practice encompasses all aspects of otolaryngology including evaluation and treatment of problems of the ears, nose and throat, as well as, thyroid disorders, skin cancers, head and neck cancers and plastic and reconstructive surgery of the head neck.
