CONTRIBUTORS

JOSEPH ALBRECHT has taught English for nineteen years, the last seventeen at East High School in Waterloo, Iowa, where he serves as department chair. He has graduated three times from the University of Northern Iowa: in 1967 with a B.A. in English; in 1970 with an M.A. in Speech; and in 1980 with an M.A. in English. Since then he has continued to take courses in English and to write both poetry and prose for publication.

TIMOTHY P. LANGE currently lives in Cedar Falls and is a graduate student in English.

DAVID POWELL taught Greek in a college in Australia as a missionary and has taught English at Faith Baptist Bible College in Ankeny, Iowa. He will receive his Master's Degree in Teaching English in the Community College in May.

JOAN TALTY currently serves as both a teaching assistant and forensics team assistant in the Department of Communication and Theatre Arts. She is completing a Master's Degree in Speech and English Education, and is particularly interested in language use. Her Master's Thesis will explore how the elderly cope with institutionalization based on an analysis of their language patterns.

ANN ELLSWORTH attended the University of Iowa and University College in London. After some years of teaching high school English, she turned her attention to farming, raising three children, weaving, and creating art exhibits for school children. In 1984 she returned to graduate school and in May she will receive her Master's Degree in English. She has published a collection of poems entitled Gentle Violence.

MICHAEL J. MCKINLAY was born in Cuba City, Wisconsin, and grew up in nearby Dubuque, Iowa. He first attended the University of Northern Iowa at the age of 16, and received his Bachelor's Degree in English in 1986. Now pursuing a Master's Degree in English, Michael is working toward a career in college-level instruction.
