Open Access Week

October 22-28 is Open Access Week! Open Access seeks to return scholarly publishing to its original purpose: to spread knowledge and allow that knowledge to be built upon in a free and open environment. Open access is made possible with the consent of the author and the copyright holder. Open Access Week is an effort to inform and promote authors, students, researchers, administrators, publishers and librarians about the benefits of Open Access. For more information about what you can do see:

and <http://www.openaccessweek.org/>

Learning to Teach

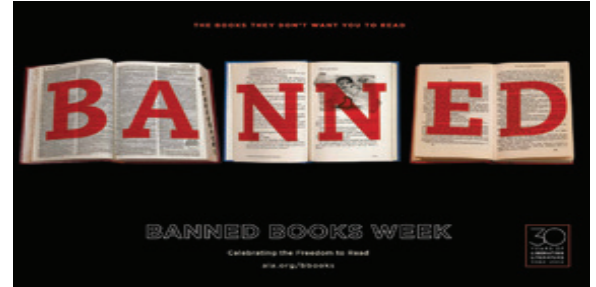

Check out the new addition to our Digital Library Collection "Learning to Teach." Follow along in the diary pages of an 18-year old Iowa farm girl who is learning to teach. From her first days as a substitute teacher in one-room schools, to the adventure of leaving home to live in the dorms while attending the three-month summer certificate program at the Iowa State Teachers College (ISTC) in Cedar Falls, she shares interesting daily details. Read autographs from fellow classmates who shared the ISTC experience in the summers of 1926, 1927, and 1928.

Banned Books Week

Banned Books Week is an annual event celebrating the freedom to read. The American Library Association is celebrating 30 years of protecting readers' rights. For a timeline of significant banned and challenged books see: <http://www.ala.org/advocacy/banned/frequentlychallenged/timeline30-years-liberating-literature>.
