JAMES HEARST

WITNESSES

The orchard basks in the mellow light of autumn, leaves drift along the hedge, a late mouse scurries for its burrow.
Three pheasants, a cock and two hens stroll with arrogant steps through frosted grass and dry leaves.
Their bronze and purple splendor witnesses as wilderness beyond the tame acre of my study. They burn in the sun and wake a vision of barbaric wonder against the windows of my safe retreat.
