Ground is broken for the UNI-Dome

The Alumnus

UNIVERSITY OF NORTHERN IOWA

SEPTEMBER 1974

alumni director

Kudos

You will see by an article in this issue of The Alumnus that construction is finally underway on the UNI-Dome.

Although our job is still far from done, at least we have now launched the project that started as a dream, progressed to a tremendous challenge and is now a reality.

As you know, the loan which Muscatine industrialist Roy Carver arranged through his bank made it possible to start work. If you have not yet contributed to our centennial campaign, remember that it is a loan and still has to be paid back.

Naturally the UNI Foundation board of directors took on a great deal of responsibility in the drive and I cannot say enough for the centennial committee under the guidance of national chairman T. Wayne Davis. It is, of course, the committee in charge of fund raising and one couldn't ask for more from this wholly-volunteer group.

There has also been tremendous help and support from the UNI administration and various campus groups, including the planning office and physical plant. The Regents, who endorsed the project from the beginning, and the board office have helped in many ways with details.

With all the help from these groups and many others, there is no indication they are going to stop now just because we are under construction, and we are looking forward to their continued assistance until the project is finally done and the UNI-Dome is ready for use. Their help, and the contributions from every one of you who has already given to the drive, have made it all possible. "Thanks" are in order at this point for a job well done, and we can look forward with confidence to the rest of the 10-year, $10-million centennial drive.

Alumni gatherings

We had some fine alumni reunions this summer in various parts of Iowa.

On June 23 we spent the day with several alums from northwest Iowa at West Okoboji Lake. Don and Lois Peters hosted the family get-together at Gull Point State Park and a good time was had by all.

The next evening alums in north central Iowa met for a fine dinner and organizational meeting at Clear Lake and afterward were treated to a fine performance by the North Iowa Jazz Ensemble under the direction of Jim Linahon, a UNI grad. There are also four UNI students in the band. This group gets together only in summers and put on four fine shows of some of the best jazz around!!! Jim Crowder and Betty Burley put together the program.

On Aug. 22 we journeyed to Ottumwa and enjoyed a combination golf, swim, tennis, and family dinner.

Everyone seems to really enjoy these get-togethers and there is every indication other groups will be forming to enjoy each other's company in various parts of the state and nation.

Rand Petersen, Board of Regents president; David Sheridan, Student Association president; T. Wayne Davis, national chairman of the centennial committee; Harry Slife, Regent and former president of the UNI Foundation; Robert Giertz, current Foundation president; Dr. John Kamerick, president of UNI; and Iowa Governor Robert Ray.

About to meet Mrs. Richard Nixon

Dr. Randall R. Bebb, B.A. '42 and professor in the department of teaching, is just a handshake away from meeting Mrs. Richard Nixon at a reception in the White House. The occasion was the annual meeting of the Association for Childhood Education International, held earlier this year in Washington D.C. Bebb, a recent Iowa state president of the group, was among organization leaders invited to meet the former first lady. Bebb has served as coordinator of student teaching in the Waterloo area for the past six years and previously taught at the lab school for 21 years.

Do college friendships last?

In June 1912, a group of 10 young women living in a rooming house on College Street in Cedar Falls were about to go separate ways after a year of sharing hard work, fun, nonsense, the despair of disappointment and the joy of achievement.

Rather than simply part, one of them suggested a chain letter be started to keep the members of the group, most of them students at UNI, in contact. The pledge was made and a system of rotation agreed upon.

Today that chain letter, thousands of pages and 62 years later, is still making the rounds, according to a report from one of its authors, Lucile E. Anderson, now living at 2663 Tallant Rd., Santa Barbara, Calif. The pattern has been followed year after year, taking six to twelve months to make a full rotation, and in each case dutifully passed along to the next on the list.

When they roomed together, they covered the educational spectrum from sub-collegiate to college seniors. According to Miss Anderson, "During those years of Iowa mud roads, a high school diploma was not always within easy grasp at home."

Three of the links are now gone: Alice Wagner Caine; Eva Anderson Jacobsen, a student of many summers who entered first in 1909; and Helen McGaughey Morgan, who earned her primary teaching degree in 1915.

Other partners in the friendship who still faithfully write are Georgia Kabele Chapman, B.Di. '13, now of Goldfield, Ia.; Pearl Wagner, Pri. '13, of Sioux City; Cora Stolt Holden, B.Di. '12, of Tyler, Tex.; Naomi Stone Flemmig, B.Di. '13, Humboldt, Ia.; Clara Sorenson Currier, Phoenix, Ariz.; Laura Patty Cummins, B.Di. '12, Bowie, Md.; and Lucile Anderson, Rur. '15 and B.A. '24.

Three graduates earn achievement awards

Three UNI graduates have been added to the list of those honored with Alumni Achievement Awards, the highest recognition bestowed by the University.

The awards were presented at commencement exercises this year. The recipients were chosen by the UNI Foundation on recommendations from faculty, staff and other members of the UNI community.

Receiving Alumni Achievement Awards this year were Donald L. Fruehling, an executive vice president of McGraw-Hill, Inc.; Dr. Ronald Roskens, chancellor of the University of Nebraska at Omaha; and Nancy Price Thompson, author and poet.

Fruehling, recently named executive vice president for elementary and high school publishing, previously was general manager of the combined Gregg and Community College Division of McGraw Hill. He received his B.A. in business education and social science in 1957 and also attended the executive training program at Columbia University's graduate school of business.

After working for a year as manager of Northwest Commercial College at Huron, S.D., Fruehling joined McGraw-Hill in 1958 as a traveler for its Gregg Division. He was later promoted to sales manager, director of marketing and then general manager.

Now living at 6 Raleigh Ct., Morristown, N.J., he became a vice president of the book company in 1970 and executive vice president in charge of five publishing divisions on June 1 this year. Fruehling was elected to the UNI Foundation board of governors this spring.

Roskens received his B.A. in social science in 1953 and M.A. in guidance and counseling in 1955, both at UNI. He went on for his Ph.D. at the University of Iowa in 1958 before joining the staff of Kent State University in Ohio.

At various times between 1959-72, Roskens served as assistant professor of education, dean of men, assistant to the president and vice president for university relations and development at Kent State. He then left to become chancellor of the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

Roskens is listed in "Who's Who in America" and has been named one of the nation's outstanding 4-H alumni. He lives at 9425 Mayberry, Omaha, Neb.

Mrs. Thompson received her M.A. in English from UNI in 1964, serving for the following year as a temporary instructor. She has had poems published in such publications as "Atlantic Monthly," "New York Times" and "Saturday Review."

She has received two prizes from the Poetry Society of America for her work and was awarded second place in competition sponsored by that organization for a poem entitled "Merry Go Round." In 1973, she published the novel "A Natural Death."

Mrs. Thompson is the daughter of Dr. Malcolm Price, president of UNI from 1940-50, and is married to Dr. Howard Thompson, professor of history. She lives at 2309 Iowa St., Cedar Falls.

GROUND IS BROKEN

Ceremony marks UNI-Dome progress

Spectators from the university and surrounding area were on hand to witness groundbreaking for the UNI-Dome on July 26. Acting as master of ceremonies was Dr. Edward Voldseth, vice president for university relations and development.

No longer a dream!

The first spadeful of dirt signified a dream-come-true for many at UNI – the start of construction on the UNI-Dome, the covered coliseum which is the first phase of the centennial campaign.

The plans are complete and the ground has been broken. The UNI-Dome is on its way to becoming reality.

What will it be like? To give you an idea, THE ALUMNUS interviewed the architects who designed the UNI-Dome. The following article details its many planned features.

The first steps past the revolving door hustle the visitor into a maelstrom of activity. Ticket sales, concessions, exhibits and hundreds of people swirl before the eyes, competing for attention.

It is the fall of 1975 and the scene is the main concourse of the UNI-Dome, which has just been completed. It has been barely a year since groundbreaking and already the first event is being held before a sellout crowd.

The aurora of the occasion is circus-like, resembling the moments before the ringmaster steps into the spotlight to announce the start of the big show. Over 8,000 people are filtering in, treading along the first of two overpasses to be built above Hudson Road, linking the dome with parking lots by the Regents and Towers residence halls.

Many of the people here tonight were on hand months earlier when the giant flexible roof was stretched across the top of the structure, and those people are anxiously waiting to get a glimpse of the building from the inside.

Our visitor spent several minutes surveying the outside before entering. Standing on the 40-foot wide plaza spanning the width of the front, or east, side, he was dwarfed by the concrete walls towering 38 feet above him, equal to the height of a four story building. The flanged sections of the outer surface and the brushed texture hide the austerity of the effort, giving the appearance of a bold, Spartan construction.

From the center where our visitor is standing, the ground drops gently to either side as the circular walls wrap around and out of sight. Only two main entrances dot the symmetry of the face, although to the right, at the north end of the building, can be seen a tunnel linking the UNI-Dome to the Physical Education Complex exactly 100 feet away.

The tunnel was a compromise, allowing students to use shower and locker facilities in the adjacent building when rising construction costs forced cuts in the original UNI-Dome plans. As it turned out, the project was held within its $5.5 million budget, with funds coming from a combination of student fees and private contributions.

As the time for the performance nears, people standing outside begin to migrate toward the entrances. The revolving doors were specifically picked to trap air pressure inside, keeping the flexible roof ballooned outward and gracefully crowned. Yet the 3.5 lbs. of pressure per square foot, or the difference between the first and ninth floors of an ordinary building, are barely noticeable.

The 18-foot concourse is now flooded with people, some wandering aimlessly inspecting the building and others purposefully searching for the second doorway to take them through the inner shell and into the arena. They are guided by bright colors painted on a coarse band of sheetrock which encircles the concrete inner wall above the heads in the crowd, colors which match the seating areas inside. Signs on it also give clues to the location of various exits, first-aid stations, rest rooms and other information.

At the south end of the concourse, stairs lead down to the playing field, which actually lies below the entrance level. Also nearby is the athletic business office, in charge of ticket sales for all athletic events inside the dome. The north end, where an office deck will eventually be added at the concourse level, is now closed off.

Along the wall to the inside chamber are nine sets of swinging doors between the concession stands and exhibits, leading to the arena itself. Already some of the inside activity can be seen through the glass panels, and a slight push opens the way for our visitor, the balanced doors clamping shut behind him, again trapping air pressure inside.

The first glance comes as a surprise. Instead of the dim, confined space expected in an auditorium, the first reaction is that of just stepping outside. Light filters in through the translucent roof fabric, so much light that on sunny days clouds can be seen passing overhead. The space inside is roughly 400 feet in diameter, or larger than a city block, and yet there isn't a post or pillar blocking the view from any point under the dome.

Our visitor is standing in the middle of the seating area, for the passageway from the concourse has left him halfway between the playing field and the top of the stands. His ticket, like the seats around him, is green, and he finds his place with little difficulty.

The roof, made of a durable teflon-coated fiberglass fabric, appears to allow more light to enter near its center because outer edges over the stands are double-layered for heating and accoustical purposes. Above the crowd there are minute holes in the inside skin, also to improve sound quality inside. The fabric is attached to 3 $\frac{1}{4}$ inch steel cables which transit the diameter of the structure, and when pressurized by the use of two large fans which bring in outside air, the cables are lifted by the fabric into the air. Yet even completely deflated, there remains a 20 foot clearance between the roof and the heads of spectators.

The cables, and the fabric, are linked along the outside perimeter to a specially designed "compression ring," simply a hollow concrete box which follows the outside curve of the building and distributes horizontal thrust forces evenly around the sides. The ring, 14 feet high and 5 feet deep, is mounted on a series of concrete pillars which circle the structure 12 feet inside the gray exterior wall.

But the compression ring has another purpose as well; because it is hollow, it serves as the main duct for the heating and air conditioning systems. Outlets along the lower side provide comfort for the crowds, while vents along the upper edge funnel heated air in the winter between the double roof layers to help melt snow. The same fans which provide the inside pressure blow air over the heating and air conditioning coils for temperature control.

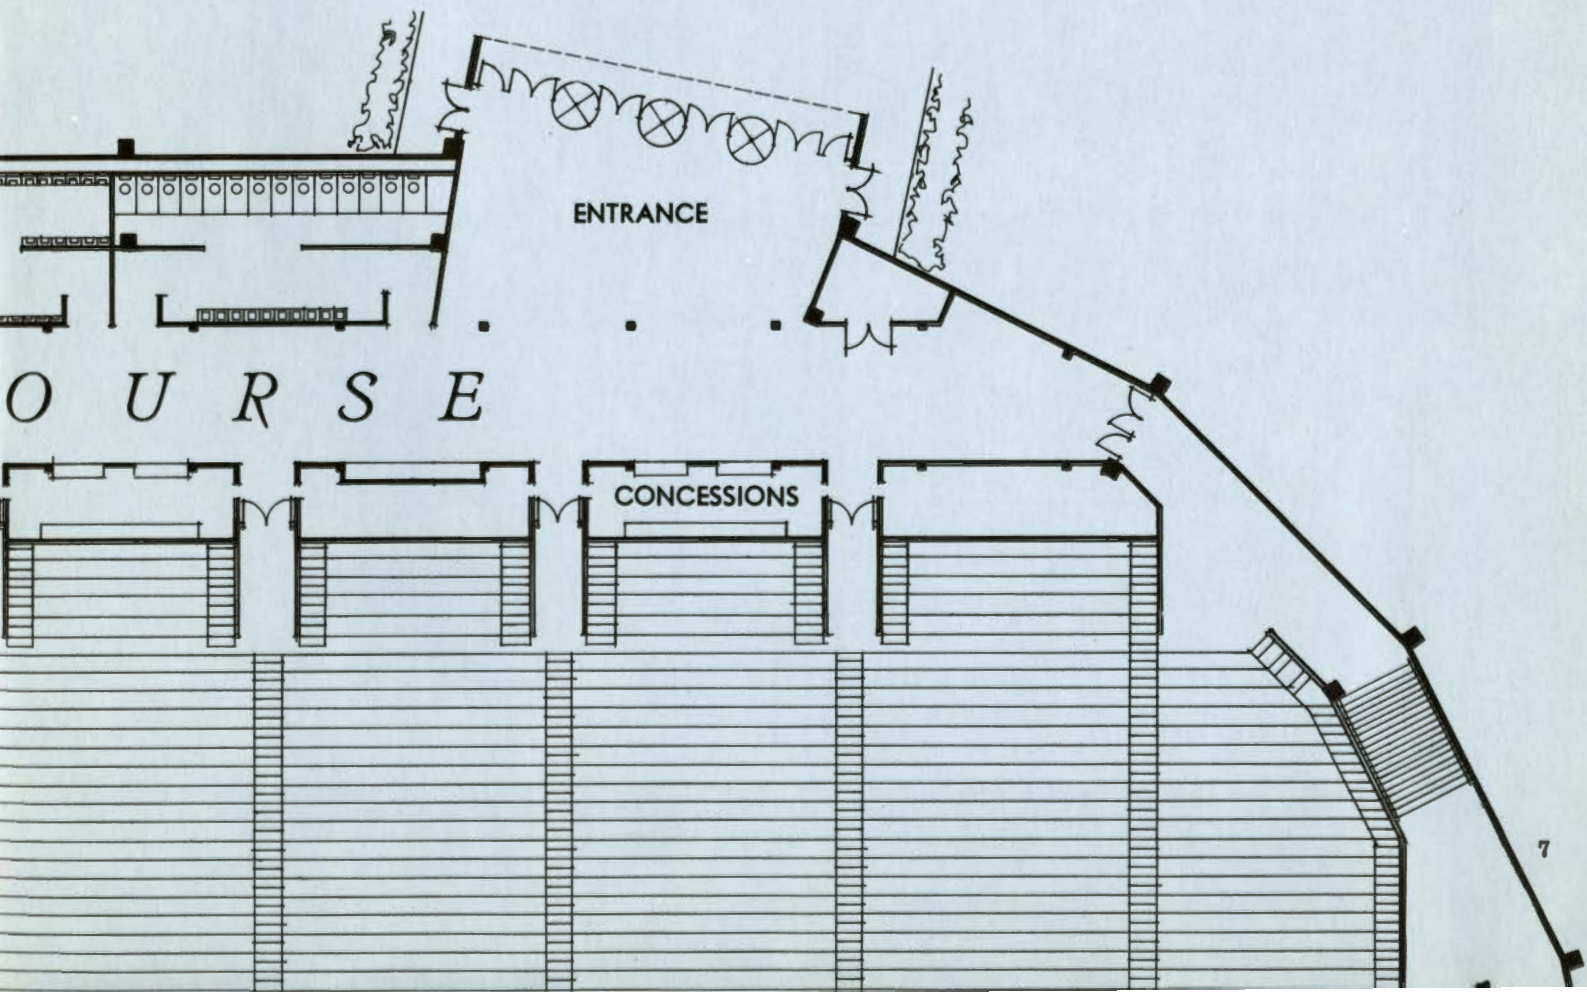

Surprisingly, the roof will afford a sizeable savings in the cost of utilities involved in operating the UNI-Dome. Because it is translucent, the cost of lighting will be reduced by $10,000 annually, based on projected use 10 hours a day, six days a week. What's more, the double-layered portion of the roof acts like a storm window, cutting heating costs by as much as 40 percent over conventional buildings. In all, the cost of utilities for the year is expected to be under $45,000.

The roof also serves as the fixture for a truss of lights to help illuminate the inside. Attached to the cables overhead, lights bring the brightness over the entire field to 75 foot-candles, while over the basketball and wrestling areas alone it will be the equivalent of 125 foot-candles, or the amount of light necessary for color television filming. Because of the translucency of the roof material, allowing 12 percent of the outside light to pass through, the level of illumination inside the UNI-Dome on a bright day is expected to reach 1,000 foot-candles.

The floor of the structure is as unique as the roof, for only eight hours ago the Panther football squad held its first scrimmage of the year indoors. Now the artificial turf which covered the playfield has been removed. Rolled up and off the field horizontally in 15-yard sections, it is actually zipped together when in use by zippers hidden between the half inch shock pad and half inch turf covering.

Portions of the artificial turf are stored out of sight in a dug-out fashioned below the first row of seats.

The recess under the stands also conceals air ducts which normally take in air for recirculation, but which also can be used for cooling and heating vents when only small-court activities are being held on the playing field.

At roughly the point of the 50-yard line, a stage has been set up for tonight's performance, utilizing one of the three power outlets on the field, two at its mid-point and one at the end. The surface is a poured synthetic urethane, smooth in the portion marked off for basketball and coarse around the field where an eight-lane, 220-yard track has been designated. Dot markings at both ends of the field also serve as guides to string off eight tennis courts, overlapping the track at some points because of the compactness of the design.

At the edge of the field stand portable bleachers which can be brought up around small-court events to provide close-in seating for all spectators, and along the north and south walls are additional exits for spectators sitting on the field. There is also a huge set of doors at the north through which even a semi truck can pass, necessary for some of the equipment carried by stage performers.

Our visitor now turns and notices the huge press box, running almost the length of the stands in back of him and near the top of the building. With entrances at either end and a capacity of 200, there are ample bay and booth facilities for radio broadcasts of events inside the UNI-Dome, plus an area for the writing press and yet another bay for newspaper and television photographers.

There are even two scouting rooms in the press box for agents of college and pro teams covering athletic events, and a convenient darkroom. In the press box area sits the public address system announcer and the control room for lights and sound.

The west side of the playing field, looking across from the present seating area, is the only place in the UNI-Dome where there is no activity. Originally planned to hold additional seating, the lack of funding required a postponement until additional money can be raised. When completed, the seating capacity will be boosted to over 17,000, including a V.I.P. booth at the top of the west stands across from the press box. At that time, two more main entrances on the west end of the building will be opened, bringing the total to four.

But thoughts of what is yet to be done are quickly forgotten. Our visitor's attention is drawn to the center of the field, where the lights have dimmed and the spotlight comes into focus. The crowd becomes silent—the show is about to begin.

Because of rapidly-rising costs, construction of the UNI-Dome was begun early in anticipation additional money would be raised to fully-equip the structure. To provide the versatile building planned, the centennial campaign for the UNI-Dome is continuing in its final stages.

Dr. Bernhard retires

Religion prof 'wholly retired'

Dr. Harold Bernhard, longtime professor of religion, is giving up teaching to "become a holy man — that's wholly retired."

After 25 years, Bernhard is leaving both his roles as teacher and director of religious activities which brought him into contact with many former students. He finished his duties at the close of the summer session and is now living in Sun City, Ariz.

"I've been working since I was 14," according to the 64-year old Bernhard, who also retired recently after 40 years as an ordained minister. "Now I'm looking forward to the opportunity to do things like reading for sheer enjoyment. It's not that I haven't enjoyed my work, but there's a difference."

The winner of an Alumni Service Award last year, Bernhard is a life member and "practically a charter member" of the National Association of College and University Chaplains, of which he served as president in 1958. In his official duties and unofficial contact with many students, he has seen religion on campus shift over the past decades.

"Religion on campus is now in an upward swing. I don't mean in terms of the traditional manner, but there is a great deal of questioning. Today's youth are more sensitized to human worth and value than 20 years ago. In many ways, today's students are more religious than before."

Dr. Harold Bernhard

Bernhard also sees religion as a necessary part of an education, and feels it should be taught in the schools not as religious acts, but as part of our cultural heritage. To give UNI students exposure to a broad array of religious experiences, he has brought people ranging from rabbis to Buddhists into his classes.

His address is 10148 Campana Dr., Sun City, Ariz., 85351.

Andersen heads speech association college and university speech instructors.

Since 1970, Andersen has been serving as a professor of speech at the University of Illinois, where he is associate department head and director of graduate study. He has a Ph.D. in speech from the University of Wisconsin.

Andersen is the former winner of the Purple and Old Gold Award, the Brindley Debate Award, and the Debate and Oratory Award at UNI. His Master's thesis was "A Historical Study of Forensics at Iowa State Teachers College, 1876-1955."

Prior to his position at Illinois, Andersen was an associate professor at the University of Michigan and a visiting professor at several schools.

Survey results show Homecoming spirit — if . . .

There are many alumni who would like to attend Homecoming, if the right events are included.

That's the conclusion reached from a special questionnaire included in the last issue of The Alumnus. The survey is part of an effort to make Homecoming more attractive by offering activities especially geared for graduates.

The results have been used to help plan this year's Homecoming celebration, which will be held Oct. 12. A schedule of the events slated and an address for reservations appears on the back cover of this issue.

Of the many graduates who responded to the survey, an overwhelming majority of 86 percent indicated they would be interested in attending Homecoming if it included the type of events that they enjoyed most. Most desired were the traditional Homecoming parade and football game, with a special seating arrangement for alumni, favored by 83 percent of those responding.

Other choices marked by large numbers of graduates included a pre-game luncheon, tours of the campus and local area and a play in the evening, all recording a 69 percent favorable vote. Closely following was an open house with former UNI faculty members, which received a 67 percent vote.

also taught between 1925-33, and earned her B.A. from UNI in 1947.

For many years she was active with the Iowa Home Economics Association, at times serving on the membership credentials committee and the I.H.E.A. Council.

College life— the second time around

By Mrs. William Van Gundy

THE AUTHOR, THE FORMER ROSALIE PIERACCI, RUR. '33, ELEM. '35, EARNED HER B.A. THIS YEAR FROM UNI AFTER MANY YEARS OF EXTENSION, CORRESPONDENCE AND CAMPUS STUDY. RETURNING FOR A SUMMER SCIENCE WORKSHOP, HER IMPRESSIONS REFLECT THE NOSTALGIA OF COLLEGE LIFE, THE SECOND TIME AROUND.

It has been more years than I care to remember since I set foot on the campus of my alma mater. How it has changed, but so have I. Winter has left a drift of snow in my hair; there are signs of weathering on my face. However, we have something in common — both the campus and I have grown larger.

With some hesitation, I walked to the main desk of the dormitory and asked for my room number — 591, fifth floor. I journeyed through a maze of halls. For some time, I lost my orientation and almost ended up in the next county before I found the correct stairway. Up, up I climbed. Some people have a football knee or some related ailment, but I have a suitcase shoulder, and I soon began to feel the weight of the luggage and my uneasy flesh.

On reaching the summit, I saw the sign "fallout" shelter. Fallout is right! If you don't fall out before you reach the top, you can pass the army physical fitness test.

I unpacked, and took an unguided tour of the unfamiliar surroundings. Memory crossed the bridge of years as I strolled by the library. (Now a new building.) How well I recalled going there to "study." With care I chose the dress I was going to wear. (We wore dresses then.) The final touch was the "wolf lure" to help me trap my prey, perhaps in the form of a football player who might walk me home or ask me to a "mixer." For weeks I jumped everytime the phone rang — but alas, for campaign promises!

In the library I also watched with hungry eyes the individuals who were "who's who" on the campus. They were the popular ones, and "rushed" for sororities, etc. (Now my wound is healed because I've been rushed ever since.) Most of the "who's who" have been lost in the shuffle and are faceless in the crowd. ("For fame is fickle as the wind, and glory fades away.")

On awakening from my reverie of the past I walked back to the dorm to face the future. The girls I met exchanged the classic questions with me. Where did you come from? Where do you teach? What are you working on? (One girl said proudly, "I'm working on a thesis." I thought to myself, "You should read the thesis I could write, after two careers, interaction with many groups, individuals and raising a family." The conferral of an honorary Master's degree should be in order here.)

I also gleaned some other bits of information. You are more or less known by your grade point instead of your name, and you study the professor instead of the course. You find out through the "moccasin telegraph" the best approach to winning the battle. Is the professor easy or hard, how often and what kind of tests does he give, or will it help to "apple polish" him?

Back in my room I reflected on the compensations of going back to college after the restless wind of youth has passed. The frantic search for self-identity is over. At this stage of life you more or less know who you are, and whenever you forget, someone reminds you.

Old dreams and expectations die hard. They are buried deep, and I have no desire to dig them up. They are replaced by an urgent desire to fill in the gaps of learning with new knowledge and ideas. (The world's knowledge doubles every seven years.) With this comes the realization that "education is a light that never grows dim, a solace that never fails."

Mrs. William Van Gundy, now living in Fort Dodge, started her career as a teacher in 1935 at the rural Woodside school north of Des Moines. Later teaching at Oakland and Centerville, she left the field to manage a photographic studio in Little Rock, Ark., before transferring to Sioux City, where she married. After moving to Omaha, Neb., and raising her family of three children, Mrs. Van Gundy returned to teaching in the Fort Dodge community school system. She now lives at 1512-10th Ave. N., in Fort Dodge.

Obstacles can't keep alumni away

Alumni came from all sections of the country to attend the 91st annual Alumni-Faculty Reunion held on campus in May. The energy problem may have kept some graduates away, but it failed to stop over 250 who made the journey back.

Among the most determined was Dr. Wilhelm Solheim, B.A. '24, of Laramie, Wyo. Avoiding the possible frustrations of driving or airline travel, he boarded a bus which whisked him back and forth in time for the celebration, with the Alumni office arranging to have him picked up and returned to the station.

The graduates of past years assembled in the Commons for a weekend of special reunion dinners and festivities. This year the classes of 1914, 1924, 1934 and 1949 were honored to mark their graduation from UNI at intervals of 25, 40, 50 and 60 years ago.

An added visitor was Stella Robinson Wynegar, of Cedar Falls. Having already earned her 50- and 60-year medals in past years, she returned to record the 75th anniversary of her graduation, which took place in 1899 when she received a Bachelor of Dialectics degree.

Among the highlights of the reunion were the dinners, campus tours and a carillon concert. Dr. Thomas Hansmeier, vice president of student services, addressed the alumni at the final reunion luncheon on Sunday.

Honoring contributions to UNI, Alumni Service Awards were presented to James L. Bailey, UNI treasurer; Charles H. Billman, assistant foreman of the UNI physical plant; Loren Buser, of Cedar Falls; Roy Carver, Muscatine; Tedda Toenjes Hach, Cedar Falls; Robert D. Mershon, Cedar Falls; Mardelle Mohn, UNI associate professor of teaching; Charles A. Patten, UNI associate professor of physical education for men; Charles Pinkham, Cedar Falls; Frank Standish, Cedar Falls; Dr. Guy Wagner, UNI emeritus professor of education; Victor Rhoades, chief engineer of the UNI physical plant; and Norman E. White, Des Moines.

CLASS OF '99 - If reunions are for memories, no one matched Mrs. Stella Robinson Wynegar of Cedar Falls at this year's reunion. An 1899 graduate, she was joined in marking her 75th reunion by Lee Miller (left), director of alumni affairs, and Darrel J. Porter, also of Cedar Falls, Alumni Association president. In addition to Mrs. Wynegar, three of the Wynegar children also attended UNI.

staff and friends

William Robinson

William G. Robinson, B.A. '48, deputy executive secretary and director of informational services for the Iowa State Education Association (ISEA), died of cancer on April 4 at the age of 46.

Robinson, a native of Humboldt county, was a classroom teacher for seven years and audiovisual director and curriculum coordinator for the Fort Dodge public schools when he joined the ISEA staff in 1959. He served as ISEA professional relations director until 1964, when he joined the Washington, D.C. staff of the National Education Association as consultant on teacher salaries.

Robinson rejoined ISEA in October 1966 as associate executive secretary and director of professional relations. He was responsible for preparing materials relating to professional negotiations for teachers. In addition to Guidelines for Professional Negotiation and Guidelines for Professional Sanctions, he developed a model teacher's contract.

As professional relations director, he worked with members who requested assistance with professional problems involving contractual relationships, certification and grievance procedures.

In 1971 Robinson was named deputy executive secretary of ISEA in charge of personnel. Last fall he also assumed the duties of the director of informational services after the director resigned.

Survivors include his father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. Tom A. Robinson, with whom he made his home at 4428-66th St., Des Moines.

Jean Griffiths

Jean Griffiths, instructor in the department of teaching, died June 23 in Waterloo following a long illness.

Mrs. Griffiths was born at Fort Dodge on Feb. 12, 1930. She received both her B.A. in 1954 and her M.A. in 1967 at UNI. She taught in public schools in Webster City and Fort Dodge, served as head of the business department for six years at Fort Dodge Senior High School, and taught at junior colleges in Webster City and Fort Dodge. She joined the UNI staff in 1968.

Survivors include her husband, John H. Griffiths, B.A. '68, 310 Ivanhoe Rd., Waterloo, and a daughter.

"Hap" Miller

State Representative Raburn G. (Hap) Miller, B.S. '36, died April 30 of an apparent heart attack. He was 64.

A first-term legislator, he represented District 47 which includes parts of Calhoun, Carroll, Greene, Pocahontas and Sac counties. A retired teacher and farmer, he owned a 330-acre farm near Rockwell City.

Born in Illinois, Mr. Miller did graduate work after earning his B.A. at UNI. He served as athletic director, coach and government teacher for 16 years in high schools and 15 years in colleges. His last coaching position was at Simpson College at Indianola.

He also was a charter member of the Iowa High School Football Coaches Hall of Fame and a member of the Iowa Baseball Coaches Hall of Fame.

He was the past president of the Iowa Property Taxpayers Association, a past Calhoun county Democratic chairman, and a member of the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation.

Survivors include his wife, Opal, who resides at RFD 2, Rockwell City, five daughters and a son.

Edward Eilderts

Edward Eilderts, a custodian at UNI since 1966, died April 5 at his home in Aplington. He had been on disability leave since 1972.

Gift of $20,000 honors former student

A $20,000 gift has been made in memory of a former student, Dr. John E. Partington, according to Robert W. Giertz, president of the UNI Foundation.

The money will be used to establish a scholarship in vocal music, as stipulated by relatives of Partington making the gift from his estate. He died in Waterloo on Nov. 11, 1972.

A native of Cedar Falls, Partington earned his B.A. from UNI in 1913, majoring in government and economics. In school, he participated in debate and sang with the Minnesingers, a men's choral group.

A letter accompanying the gift read that Partington had made many friends in the music department while he attended UNI.

After holding various positions, including superintendent at Swea City, Partington attended the University of Iowa, earning his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in economics. From 1927-42, he served as an assistant professor there, later working during World War II with the Internal Revenue Service in Washington, D.C.

He returned to the University of Iowa and retired from there as an emeritus professor in the College of Commerce. In 1968, a special academic title was designated in his honor, the Partington Professorship in Insurance, recognizing him as one of the country's pioneers in insurance education.

He is survived by two sisters, Miss Evelyn Partington, Waterloo, and Mrs. Merle A. Heath, of Sun City, Ariz.
