TV History Series Produced by Herb Hake

"History With Herb Hake," a kinescope series made by Herbert V. Hake, college director of radio and TV, is being shown over thirty-six educational television stations in the nation this year.

The twenty-six program history series traces the historical development of the Great Plains and the Prairies. The series was scheduled to begin over station KDPS-TV in Des Moines the week of December 6 and WOI-TV, Ames, January 3.

The programs were produced at WOI-TV and released by the National Educational Television and Radio Center for use by stations on the "educational network."

First broadcasts of the series over educational television stations in widely scattered areas of the nation began September 26. Mr. Hake said he has received "fan mail" from teachers and university professors to an advertising agency man, and from states from Massachusetts to California.

Mr. Hake chose a different Midwest historical landmark to dramatize each "lesson," while he discusses the historical significance of the site with photographs, books, songs, and his own cartoons for props.
