Theories of Race, Class and Gender

May Term 2015  MoTuWeThFr 1:20-3:30  CAP 3151:01

Dr. Harry Brod

This Capstone course examines social and ethical aspects of oppression and privilege in personal and political life. We consider experiential and theoretical dimensions of such categories as race, ethnicity, class, gender and sexuality, and learn to evaluate strategies of resistance and/or accommodation.

No expertise in money, sex or power is required.

(Though some prior experience might be a good thing.)

"Money, Sex and Power: Theories of Race, Class and Gender " is taught by Dr. Harry Brod, Professor of Sociology and Humanities in the Department of Sociology, Anthropology, and Criminology.
