- Article 4. "The members of this corporation shall consist of the members of the Alumni Association and those officially connected with the Iowa State Teachers College."
- Article 3. "The object of this corporation shall be to promote the moral and intellectual welfare of young people and to that end it may receive property by gift, devise and purchase, and may loan, gift, or otherwise use the same for the general purpose as herein set out."
- Article 2. "The principal place of business of this corporation shall be at the Iowa State Teachers College, Cedar Falls, Iowa.

At the annual business meeting held May 13, 1946, it was revealed that 17 persons were being assisted by loans totaling $1,189.47. Over the last 15 years an average of 38 persons per college year have been enabled to remain in college to complete courses for graduation by means of these loans.

It is a fact that a few recent bequests that were intended for the Seerley Foundation, Inc., could not be transferred to the Foundation because of legal technicalities in not stating the exact name of the Foundation.

If a bequest is to reach the Foundation it is necessary that the legal papers clearly state that it is for:

The Seerley Foundation, Inc., for The Alumni Association of the Iowa State Teachers College, Cedar Falls, Ia.

Ever since its organization The Seerley Foundation has had applications for loans by worthy and needy students that far exceed the available funds on hand. At present the policy restricts loans to those students who are within four terms of graduation and whose scholastic record is average or above. The amount of the loan rarely exceeds the amount of tuition for a single term at a time. Thus far the success in obtaining repayment of loans has been better than the average in the United States.

If the valuable and helpful services from loans are to be made more adequate to the needs; and if the Foundation is to be prepared to assist in still other lines pertinent to the general purposes for which it has been established, it can come about only through increased funds being made available.

THE OFFICERS IN THE SEERLEY FOUNDATION FOR THE CURRENT YEAR ARE: A. C. FULLER, PRESIDENT, WINFIELD SCOTT, SECRETARY, BENJAMIN BOARDMAN, TREASURER.

The CAMPUS TODAY

Enrollment Increases 72%

Enrollment in the Teachers College 12-weeks summer session showed an increase of 72 per cent over last summer's, according to Registrar Marshall R. Beard.

With men more numerous than in any previous summer session in history, statistics showed a total of 1,459 students, with 549 men and 910 women. Enrollment last summer was 847.

Among men students, 411, or 85 per cent, are veterans.

Meanwhile branch summer school enrollments were up 50 per cent over last summer's. The total of the three schools, at Carroll, Creston and Spencer, was 275 for the 12-weeks session.

Married Students Organize

Such knotty problems as housing and rising grocery bills were the subject for many an informal session of the student wives' club on the Teachers College campus last year.

Even the menfolk took up such perpetually perplexing items when they assembled. with their wives, for social meetings and potluck picnics sponsored by the Couplers' Club.

The student wives' club, originally a project of the American Association of University Women, was sponsored by Mrs. Ernest Fossum, wife of an English department staff member.

In addition to discussing everyday housewifely problems, the young housewives heard talks by several faculty members, including Elizabeth Sutherland, head of home economics, Alison Aitchison, professor emeritus of geography, and Margaret Kelly, home economics instructor.

Two couples headed the Couplers' Club during the spring. They were Gene and Marty Harrington and Dick and Doris Gorman. Faculty sponsor is Vernon P. Bodein, director of religious activities.

Palmer Heads Association

Harold G. Palmer, acting head of the industrial arts department, was elected president of the American Industrial Arts association at its conference in Oak Park, Ill., in May.

Other Teachers College faculty members attending the conference were W. H. Wagner and W. E. Ditzler, instructors in industrial arts, and Burl Berry, instructor in the Teachers College High School.

Approximately 500 delegates from 35 state and regional districts attended the conference. Iowa is third in membership in the national association.

Student Leaders Hold Workshop

More than 200 Teachers College student leaders participated in a series of workshops on the responsibilities of leadership on April 30 and May 8 on the campus.

Dr. Henry Wieman of the University of Chicago and Miss Helen Rush of the University of Pittsburgh were guest speakers at the workshops.

Campus leaders attending the conferences included presidents, vice presidents, and program chairmen of all collegiate organizations, ranging from dormitory units to social sororities and fraternities.

Miss Brugger Resigns Post

M. Elisabeth Brugger, supervisor of the nursery school and assistant professor of teaching, resigned her position at the end of the spring quarter. She is now making her home in in Columbus, Nebr.

A familiar figure to hundreds of Cedar Falls grade school students, Miss Brugger has been director of the campus pre-school for the last 15 years.

Born in Columbus, Nebr., she received her B.A. degree at the University of Nebraska and her M.A. degree at Columbia University.

Senior Group Elects Members

Five new members were tapped for Torch and Tassel, senior women's honor organization on May 1.

Those elected to the honor are Maezene Hall, Cresco; Audra Heater, Yale; Maurine DeWitt, Griswold; Janet Gallagher, Eddyville; and Norma June Peters, Marne. Qualifications for Torch and Tassel membership are based on leadership and scholarship.

Fraternities Organize Again

Four fraternities are again active on the campus. A total of 48 men were initiated in May. The reactivated fraternities are Xanho, Lambda Gamma Nu, Phi Sigma Epsilon, and Alpha Chi Epsilon.

Loring Carl of Waterloo was elected president of the Interfraternity Council. Other officers include Bob Kennedy of Eldora, secretary; Kenneth Church of Muscatine, vice-president; and Edgar Hermann of Waterloo, treasurer. W. H. Wagner, instructor in industrial arts, and Dr. Harold C. Trimble, assistant professor of mathematics, are sponsors of the Council.

Band Tours High Schools

Eleven high schools in northeast Iowa heard the Teachers College concert band while it was on its three-day tour in April.

The 65 members of the band under the direction of Myron E. Russell, associate professor of music, were selected from the men's band and women's band which made up the Teachers College marching band. They played a program of standard classics, modern and popular numbers, and novelty selections, as well as both instrumental and vocal solos.

The band played in Independence, Manchester, Strawberry Point, Oelwein, West Union, Postville, New Hampton, Cresco, Osage, Manly, and Mason City.

Alumni Attend Their First Post-War Reunion

More than 300 Teachers College alumni attended the lively sixty-third general alumni reunion in the Commons on Saturday, May 25. It was the first general reunion held since 1942.

Members of the 1896 class which graduated from what was then called the Iowa State Normal School returned for their 50-year reunion. The class of 1921 held its twenty-fifth anniversary reunion while members of the classes of the years 1918, 1919, and 1920 held their postponed twenty-fifth anniversary meetings.

"1" and "6" Are Honored

All alumni were invited to attend the day's activities, but classes whose year numeral ended in "one" or "six" were especially urged to come.

The reunion program started off with informal visiting and registration in the Commons lounge on Saturday morning. At noon the alums went "down the line" in the Commons cafeteria and ate together in the main dining room.

An informal program followed the lunch. Lester McCoy, instructor in music, led the guests in group singing. Miss Olive Barker, B.A. '31, was at the piano. A. C. Fuller, M.Di. '99 and Director of Alumni Service, was master of ceremonies in the absence of Minard W. Stout, B.A. '29, president of the General Alumni Association.

President Malcolm Price presented the 13 members of the class of 1896 attending the luncheon gold medals. At the same time 10 of the 19 members of the 1896 class living in or near Los Angeles were assembled in the Hotel Biltmore, Los Angeles, to commemorate their fiftieth anniversary of graduation. They sent a telegram of greetings to members of the faculty and other members of the class of 1896.

The California delegation voted informally to express approval of the proposed change in name of their alma mater to the "Iowa College of Education."

Earl Dunn of Manchester, a member of the class of 1946, responded for his class joining the ranks of the Teachers College alumni.

Miss Helen P. Fullerton, B.A. '18, adviser of Girls' Junior College, Mason City, gave the response for the class of 1918. She pointed out that her class had a total of more than 5000 teaching years to its credit. Mrs. Sophus C. Jacobsen (Leona E. Short), B.A. '19, Cedar Falls, responding for the class of 1919 compared her class with the 1946 class for both were the first graduated following a world war.

Teachers College students these days, with all their facilities, can't have more fun than students did back in 1920, according to Clifford P. Archer, B.A. '20, Placement Director at the University of Minnesota, who presented the class of 1920.

Miss Willamina Jongewaard, B.A. '21, of Sioux Center, on furlough from missionary service in Palamaner, India, told the luncheon guests about her work.

President Price greeted alumni and spoke of a few of the problems the Teachers College faces in the post-war era.

● The housing situation being what it is, two Teachers College students brought their house with them on registration day. Chef-hatted Douglas Brown asks roommate Richard Skilling, "How many eggs today?" Brown is working up an appetite for a home-cooked meal as he drives in a hinge pin on the screen door of their 8 feet by 20 feet one-room house.

Home on Wheels Solves GI Housing Crisis

Two resourceful GI's at Teachers College solved their housing problem the easy way. They merely packed an unused house, measuring 8 feet by 20 feet, into a truck and moved forthwith to Cedar Falls.

Finding a beneficent farmer living near the campus, they were able to rent a spot of ground on which to erect their home. The monthly rental is a nominal six dollars, including electricity and water.

The envy of many a houseless veteran, these two Algona freshmen, Richard Skilling and Douglas Brown, eat, sleep and study in their comfortable, one-room home. Located west of the athletic stadium, the house stands amid shady trees on the J. E. Anderson farm.

Complete with kitchen, roll-away bed, electric lights, a linoleum-covered floor and an oil burner for winter, the GI's figure that their housing is solved until graduation.

Able chef of the household is tall, dark and easy-going Brown, who can turn out apple pie, doughnuts and tasty meat dishes as easily as most housewives boil water.

Brown does not own a cook book. In rare, forgetful moments he consults the kitchen curtains for advice in making a dish. This habit does not sound strange when one knows that the unbleached muslin kitchen curtains are embroidered with the cook's favorite recipes.

House-cleaning, however, is a different proposition. Says rotund, affable Skilling, "That's where I come in, I'm afraid."

The one-room home is so attractive and functional that one desperate married veteran, with a youngster, offered to pay room rent for the two frosh in one of the men's dormitories, and what's more, he would even pay for their meals.

The Algona GI's rejected the offer, saying "There's no place like home, even if it is only one room."

For students without a house among their luggage, the housing crisis was not solved quite so easily.

Men's Union, student organization took the lead in seeing that something constructive was done to relieve the situation.

Cooperating with the Cedar Falls Chamber of Commerce, Men's Union sent 200 student canvassers to each house in Cedar Falls. The doorbell ringing brigade, questionnaire in hand, asked every householder the same question, "Do you have any rooms to rent?"

Keith Keel of Traer headed the drive, which sought to uncover 600 rooms—300 for six-weeks summer students and another 300 for fall quarter enrollees.

Although they fell short of their ambitious goal, student canvassers did find quarters for 340 students. Miraculously, they found 20 apartments for married students, thus saving much painful pavement pounding.

Facilities were made available for 140 summer students and for 200 fall term students. In addition, they uncovered 55 "probable" rooms, which may be available in September.

College authorities, in commenting on the drive, said that the college had instructional and classroom facilities for over 2,000 students, providing housing facilities could be obtained.

Preparations are being made to "double-deck" the dormitories in the event that it becomes necessary.

Easing the housing problem for GI's is the allocation by federal housing authorities of accommodations for 144 married veterans.

Eighteen quonset huts have arrived on the campus and are being erected in the southeast corner of the campus, south of highway 57. The huts, with rounded roofs, measure 48 feet by 20 feet and will accommodate two families.

The remainder of the housing units will be one-story metal barracks, measuring 54 feet by 20 feet and accommodating two families. Oil heaters will warm the units in winter.

● Richard Skilling consults chef Douglas Brown about the possibilities of whipping up a little "comfort frosting" for his favorite cake, butter cake. These kitchen curtains come in handy, embroidered as they are with the chef's favorite recipes. The kitchen occupies one corner of their compact 8 feet by 20 feet house.

Teachers College Inaugurates Safety Course

To answer the increased demand for teachers of safety education, the Iowa State Teachers College will inaugurate a special safety course, beginning with the 1946 fall quarter.

In announcing the course, President Malcolm Price said, "At the present time, we have a marked demand for teachers of safety education, but we have no candidates to offer."

Henceforth Teachers College students will be able to select safety education as one of their teaching minors. A strong minor, with 27 hours credit, is being offered, with specific instruction in all types of safety education.

Driving Range to Be Erected

An extensive driving range, re-creating all of the hazards of highway driving, will be constructed on a 65-acre tract south of the campus. It will be complete with all types of roads, highway signs and signals, hazardous crossings, curves and intersections.

Using dual control cars, the teachers of tomorrow will teach teen-age drivers how to drive safely.

The safety program was unanimously endorsed by 15 state highway and safety experts who met with President Price late in May to consider ways of combatting the rising "sudden death" toll in Iowa.

Pointing out that times have changed from the days of the Model T Ford, he said that young drivers now have high-powered cars at their control. The old method of taking the Model T out onto a country road and learning to drive by "guesswork" is antiquated, he said. A scientific training program is now essential to prevent further fatalities.

To earn a minor in safety education, students will be required to take the following courses:

Educating for Safety, 3 hours; The Teaching of Highway Safety, 3 hours; Safety Education in Elementary Schools, 3 hours; Safety Education in Secondary Schools, 3 hours; Survey of Physical Sciences, 5 hours; Educational Psychology, 5 hours; Audio-Visual Education, 3 hours; and either First Aid to the Injured, 2 hours, or Training and First Aid, 2 hours.

Governor Blue addressed the safety conference, endorsing the program. "Proper education will reflect itself in the actions of our drivers. I am convinced that safety education will pay dividends," he declared.

Bert Woodcock, B.S. '29, director of the safety education division of the Iowa Department of Public Safety, recommended that all high schools insert safety programs in their curricula.

"The cost of a safety program is about the same as for any vocational subject," Mr. Woodcock said. "Safety costs money but not any more than home making or industrial arts."

W. Earl Hall of Mason City, vice-president of the National Safety council, reported on the national conference called by President Truman.

Hall Describes New Bible

"A new Bible of safety has been written. It supersedes the old testament made under President Hoover in 1926. This program, if applied universally, will reduce accidents to the vanishing point — ultimately, not over night," he asserted.

Concerned over Iowa's rising accident toll, S. N. Jespersen, B.A. '27, chief of the Iowa Highway Safety patrol, also addressed the group.

"It seems to me that our drivers are acting very much like a bunch of youngsters who have just been let out of quarantine for measles," Chief Jespersen said. "Our young people are having too many accidents. If the majority of our high schools would put in a traffic safety program, it would be a step in the right direction."

Commencement Is Colorful This Year

In the Iowa State Teachers College's first full-dress Commencement since the war's end, 170 students received degrees and diplomas Saturday, May 25, in the Auditorium.

Principal speaker at the sixty-ninth annual Commencement was the Reverend Joseph J. Sittler of the Chicago Theological Seminary, who decried the "degradation of the democratic dogma."

He declared that this degradation has resulted "from our triviality in the use of social reason, our small and ungallant vision of the possibilities of the common life, our flabby will and our despisal of self-discipline."

He urged the graduates to be boldly critical of what happens to their democracy, saying, "The premises of the democratic faith cannot be 'taken as shoppers take a tram.'"

"Others are bidding high for the allegiance of all the little people of the world by advancing a totally different set of premises. Our premises can only be maintained when knowledge operating as criticism constantly reaffirms their rightness by proving them in the dynamic and the changing life of the moment," he said.

The Reverend Mr. Sittler also pointed out that knowledge brings power, but this in itself is not always desirable.

"We are not necessarily a better people if, having learned to save a million lives with penicillin, we wipe out a million others with blockbusters," he asserted.

Advises Bold Criticism

He concluded with this advice to the teachers of tomorrow: "Here is the voice of our true vocation: to cause the advancing knowledge of the student to come to bear as criticism upon his personal, social and national life."

President Malcolm Price conferred degrees and diplomas and also presented special awards and prizes to students who had distinguished themselves during the academic year just concluding.

Purple and Old Gold awards for "meritorious scholarship" went to Lois Frederick of Marion, Elynor Gasser of Waterloo and

Violin Playing Comes Naturally to Youngsters

Proving that music lessons are not necessarily boring and can even be fun, today's tousle-headed kindergarteners at the Iowa State Teachers College Campus School wield violin bows as naturally as virtuosos.

These nimble-fingered five-year-olds have taken to violins, violas and cellos as easily as most youngsters take to playing cops and robbers. Putting down their instruments they also sing harmonically, in two parts, a feat which ordinarily baffles upper-graders.

The most amazed onlookers are their bewildered parents who find such enthusiasm a far cry from the day when uninterested youngsters dutifully and unmelodically pounded the piano for an hour daily.

Schneider Is the Teacher

The man behind this musical miracle is dapper, auburn-haired Melvin Schneider, who believes that some American music educators are completely "off the beam" in teaching children an appreciation of music.

"Musical progress has come to us not because of music educators but to a large extent in spite of them," he asserts.

Frowning on "lonesome" piano-practicing, he gives his youngsters a string instrument and a chance to play in a quartet with his classmates. Singing together as well, they learn instrumental and vocal music simultaneously.

Group playing also makes music a young experiment in democracy, he believes, since the children must work together to make sweet music.

"When an individual does his part well, he does something for himself and something for the group," Mr. Schneider says. "And, negatively, when he doesn't do his part well, he stops his progress as well as that of the group."

Firmly convinced that "all children have music in their souls," Mr. Schneider finds that most youngsters are ready for musical instruction at kindergarten age. It is easier for children of this age to study music because they are open-minded. They have no prejudices or preconceived ideas to overcome.

"Except for the unusual individual, I am convinced that music instruction on strings should be started no later than the second grade.

"At kindergarten age a child's muscles are pliable and respond more readily than they will a few years later, and incidentally, he gains better control of his fingers, arms and shoulders," Mr. Schneider explains.

He believes that string instruments are the best for beginners because a child must listen and hear the tones he plays. In addition, he must listen to the other members of the quartet and hear all four parts. Whereas, in piano work, he concentrates in putting the right finger on the right key and doesn't even hear or understand the music.

They Really Like to Play

"These children never draw their bows across the strings just for the sake of dragging their bows across the strings," Mr. Schneider says. They play because they wish to express a musical idea, and if they hit a sour note, they grimace before the teacher can call their attention to the error.

After one year's work with Campus School musicians, Mr. Schneider now has recorded evidence substantiating his theory. Recordings were made by three quartets, one representing the third grade, another the combined first and second grade, and another the kindergarteners.

All of the youngsters had the same amount of musical training, but the kindergarteners' work was by far the best. "They put more into it," Mr. Schneider said. "Therefore their playing had better musical feeling."

A Junior Symphony Formed

Kindergarten instruction concluded, the 32 junior musicians have now formed a string orchestra, which makes it possible for them to continue their music in a public school where it is necessary for children to be taught in larger groups.

Under this plan, Mr. Schneider points out that each student has daily experience in leadership. He may start his quartet in the playing of a composition, set the tempo and control its entire interpretation.

If one kindergartner has an idea or ideas for a new composition, he must be able to express himself clearly before he can obtain a "go-ahead" signal from the other members.

These young musicians, who play for 20 or 30 minutes daily, would rather forego their "game" periods for more music practice. Often when Mr. Schneider tells them that "practice" is over for the day and that they can now play games, the children complain, "Do we have to quit? Fooy." Since no lonely home practice is required, they look forward to the next day's session.

Inspiration Strikes Children

Proving that youngsters do grasp the idea of musical expression, Mr. Schneider points to a five-year-old cellist, who, while bowing on his lowest string, suggested that the quartet play an elephant march.

"Like this," he said, as he drew long, firm bows slowly on the C string. The tonic indicated the slow, lumbering steps of elephants he had seen recently in a circus parade.

Subsequently the "Elephant March" became the No. 1 piece on the kindergartners' hit parade. Satisfying other "uninhibited desires," particularly for pleasing sound effects, the young musicians went to work on such new selections as "Bells," "See-Saw," "Swinging," "Mousey," "Jingle Bells" and "The Siren."

Not every kindergartner is mature enough for string work. If so, he is not encouraged to play. His turn will come later.

"In three days we can tell by his response if he is ready for musical training," Mr. Schneider reports. In last year's kindergarten class, 32 of the 51 members participated in string quartet work. This, says Mr. Schneider, is a fair average.

The ones not participating will be given another chance at string instruments next year. By the third grade those few still not playing in the orchestra will be given the same opportunity on woodwinds and brasses.

By fourth grade the last "hold-outs" should be ready for percussion instruments. Mr. Schneider will then have a complete symphony orchestra with every pupil playing an instrument which fits his ability and personality.

Piano May Be Next

After a child has studied a string instrument a few years, he may wish to express himself harmonically alone. He may actually want to study piano. The result is almost universally a very good pianist, who enjoys playing because his technique is but a means for musical expression, not the end.

Says Mr. Schneider, he won't be nearly so apt to call out every five minutes or so, "Hey, Mom, can I stop now?"

These musical theories first came to Mr. Schneider about 20 years ago when he was doing research work under James L. Mursell of the Columbia University fine arts school. He was assisting Dr. Mursell in writing his book, "Psychology of Music."

Seeing how badly music was taught in the public schools, Mr. Schneider thought there must be a better way. It seemed to him that most music education was lavished on students

Panthers Seek Fourth Conference Crown

Spring practice is over and the 1946 football season is just around the corner.

Coach Clyde L. "Buck" Starbeck's team is determined to capture its fourth consecutive North Central crown, in addition to increasing its string of consecutive loop victories, now at 18.

If seven lettermen of the championship teams of 1941 and 1942 return to school, as they have indicated, Starbeck will probably have another powerful eleven prowling the gridirons this fall.

The Panthers appear to be the best fortified at the end positions. Four former letter winners, Nick Avelchas, Waterloo; Cy Bellock, River Forest, Ill.; Ken Griffin, Jamestown, N. D.; and Lauren Hagge, Hibbing, Minn., will be available.

The center post will undoubtedly prove to be Starbeck's number one problem, since no one with experience is available. The Panther mentor will have hold-overs from last year for the tackle and guard berths. Anyone of the veteran linemen may shift over to plug the gap at center.

Starbeck has two veterans, Aaron Linn, Chicago, and Dick Bowen, Cedar Falls, from his pre-war teams available for the guard positions. Linn earned an all-conference rating in 1941, playing practically 60 minutes of football every Saturday.

LaVene Camarata, plunging Cedar Falls fullback, heads the list of backfield candidates. At least three star hold over backs from last year's eleven will be available.

Several other promising men, who were engaged in spring sports, will be seeking a regular berth this fall.

Homecoming Is October 19

Western Michigan State of Kalamazoo, Mich., will be the Panther's Homecoming foe Saturday, October 19.

Dad's Day will be November 2 with North Dakota State College as the Panthers' opponent.

Two other home games, with Hamline University October 12, and Drake University November 16, round out the four-game home schedule.

Coach "Mun" Whitford gives the "hit and run" signal to a Panther batter in the extra inning game with the Iowa Seahawks in Cedar Falls.

Athletic Teams Garner Twenty-eight Victories

Athletic teams representing five major sports at Teachers College completed the current year with a record of 28 victories, 16 losses, and one tie.

Coach Dave McCuskey's undefeated wrestling team won five dual meets, tied one, and captured three national grappling titles.

Coach Oliver M. Nordly's basketball team won 13 of 20 games, while Clyde L. Starbeck's football team won three of six games last fall.

The Panther baseball nine, first since 1942, broke even this season, winning six of twelve games.

Coach Lawrence W. Whitford's pitchers turned in several top performances on the mound, but the inability of the sluggers to hit consistently with men in scoring positions proved costly.

The Panthers defeated Washington University and Luther College each twice and scored single victories over Iowa Pre-flight and Simpson College.

Don Shupe, Burlington shortstop, paced the Panther sluggers with a .302 average and batted in nine runs. Don Herron, left fielder from Marquette, finished second in hitting with an average of .272.

Ed Krum, Van Horne, and Joe Segar, Webster City, who appeared in half the games, finished with a batting average of .307 and .300 respectively.

Carl Dresselhaus, southpaw hurler from New Albin, broke even, winning two of four games. The veteran Lyle Dodd, Emmetsburg righthander, won three and lost four. Lawrence Dorsey of Gravity, won his only start and appeared as a relief hurler twice.

Five Seniors Are Lost

Five seniors, pitcher Lyle Dodd, Emmetsburg, second baseman Lyn Schaffer, Milwaukee, Wis., catcher Norman White, Jefferson, and outfielders Bob Titsworth, Webster City, and Claude Snell, Mason City, will not be available next year.

Coach Arthur D. Dickinson's track team won its only dual meet of the season in addition to turning in impressive performances in six of the leading track carnivals in the middle west.

The Panther's 440 and 880-yard relay combination of Clarence Hightshoe, Iowa City, Paul Van Kamen, Lake Mills, John Clark and Bob Ryan, both of Waterloo, performed most consistently throughout the season. Ryan and Van Kamen were also top sprinters.

Elwin Goodvin, Clarinda, was outstanding in the weights, while Jess Palmer, Hampton, was a standout pole vaulter.

The Dickinson-men captured eleven firsts in trouncing Cornell College 90 to 41. Competing in the Beloit relays for the first time, the Panthers won two events and placed in nine others to finish only three points behind the winners, Lawrence College. Dickinson's relay teams won two firsts and a third at the Holstein relays.

In their own annual classic, the Teachers College relays, the Panthers placed in twelve events, winning four. At the Drake carnival they captured the half-mile and one-mile relay events for Iowa colleges and placed in two other relay events.

In the Dakota relays the Panthers placed in eight events, winning four. In the state AAU meet Decoration Day, Palmer won the pole vault. In addition, the Panthers placed in four other events.

from the sixth grade up. He secretly felt that education should begin with much younger children.

Mr. Schneider, who was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1930, continued research on this idea during 12 years of public school work in Wisconsin.

For five years he and his wife conducted a private research, sanctioned by the University of Wisconsin, among Madison youngsters. They organized string quartets for children within the age limits of $3\frac{1}{2}$ years to 12. Some of the quartets were purely neighborhood and extra-curricular affairs.

Before the end of the first year, however, the results overwhelmingly indicated that kindergarten quartets were by far the most musical. Mr. Schneider now believes he is on the right track. "What I can't understand," he says, "is why nobody thought of this method 50 or 100 years ago."

Musicians Hold Festival

Approximately 200 Teachers College students participated in the annual May music festival held on May 1, 2, and 3 in the Auditorium.

The band under the direction of Myron E. Russell, associate professor of wood-wind instruments, opened the festival program.

On May 2, the College Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Dr. Edward Kurtz, head of the department of music, presented its concert. Carl Anton Wirth, professor of brass instruments and theory, conducted his own composition, "Episodes from the Life of Ichabod Crane." The number had never before been heard in Cedar Falls although it had been played by music groups in other sections of the country.

Three students from the orchestration class of Mr. Wirth conducted the orchestra in the playing of their own orchestrations. They were Eunice Peacock of Tripoli, Letha Holthaus of Manchester, and Leonard Kokesh of Waterloo.

Final event of the May festival was the choral concert on May 3 under the direction of Harald Holst, associate professor of voice.

Letters To the Editor

Reconversion Is Here

Murray, Ky . . . The covers of The Alumnus were particularly nice this time I thought—I just got mine—after it was forwarded to me from Atlanta, Ga., and with everything in bloom here, those covers were also a contrast!

After 28 months as a statistical officer for the IFIS squadron (Instrument Flight Instructors' School) at the Naval Air Station, Atlanta, Ga., being a civilian, and being back at my old job here at Murray State College is a very welcome change.

I was released from active duty the second of January and was back in my classroom the seventh of January. Since then I have been so busy getting my courses organized ahead of my classes (instead of one jump ahead) and getting myself toughened to the fast pace of the old campus life, I haven't had time to think about my reconversion problems.

Consequently, I don't know when I reached the converted stage, but I have concrete evidence it has happened, for I wore a new spring hat the other day with practically no self-consciousness.

I have a good sprinkling of veterans in my classes—one was a German POW for nine months, another is 40 and he has a tremendous bass voice—the GI bill gave him a chance to get into the music education field, and he's having a wonderful time in this collegiate atmosphere.—Marjorie J. Palmquist, B.S. '35.

They Favor New Name

Binghamton, N. Y. . . . Inasmuch as Iowa State Teachers College is the leading institution of its kind in the U.S.A., its name should designate it from the several smaller institutions in the various states. The suggested name "Iowa College of Education" is appealing, and, I believe, would indicate its position in comparison with other colleges and normal schools.

A few outstanding names selected by a committee and submitted to the alumni and student body for a poll would, at least, crystallize the sentiment.—J. E. Barnes, M.Di. '10.

Wichita, Kans. . . . I was a student when the name was changed to Iowa State Teachers College. The students got busy and petitioned the state legislature and had a bill presented and they passed it. I think it is a fine idea to change it again to Iowa College of Education.—Grace DuBois Lynch, B.E. '12.

Ft. Collins, Colo. . . . I am in favor of changing the name of Iowa State Teachers College to Iowa College of Education. This will do away with the objectionable name "Teachers College."—Mrs. William Beall (Edith Curtis), M.Di. '95.

They Say "Nay"

Iowa City, Ia. . . . Don't encourage a change in name until there is a far better reason for it than has been advanced.—F. C. Ensign, M.Di. '95.

Chicago, Ill. . . . I am not in favor of changing the name of Iowa State Teachers College as it is known all over the United States as the above.—Mrs. K. B. Valentine (Lucille Bell), Pri. '20.

Melrose Park, Ill. . . . From the tone of several letters recently appearing in The Alumnus it appears that some of our loyal graduates who have wandered far from their native heath are having to hang their heads in shame because they got their education at a place called Iowa State Teachers College.

They feel it would be more conducive to their social comfort if the name of our alma mater were changed to something more resounding, such as "Iowa College of Education" or some such awe-inspiring label.

Our esteemed grads have put the cart before the horse, a common failing. They feel that by virtue of attending a college they have acquired a label that tags them forevermore, for good or bad.

Since they are not big enough to make the name of Iowa State Teachers College stand for something good amidst the alien corn, these peregrinating pedagogues wish to cover up their own shortcomings by changing the label on the can.

About all that ISTC has to show for its many years of honorable service is a large body of alumni. If the name of ISTC causes these wayward sons and daughters a twinge of shame while in the presence of the offspring of some of the more famous kindergartens of the Atlantic seaboard, who is to blame . . . the Iowa State Teachers College?

True worth does not spring from a name. The real value of Harvard, Yale or Princeton lies in the honorable record made by their faculties and alumni.

Could it be that some TC grads are degenerating into sycophantic "coattail riders" bent on raising a false front of glamour to blind ignorant outlanders to the fact that they come from the type of college they do . . . an Iowa State Teachers College?

I don't object to the name proposed. I do decry the feeling of embarrassment these characters evince when they have to admit they come from a Teachers College. If that bothers them, why didn't they enroll in a barber's college? Then they could call it "Tonsorial University."—Melvin J. Slacks, B.A. '29.

Iowans Visit California

Griswold, Iowa . . . I noticed on the back of the January Alumnus that you said, "Drop a note to your Alma Mater." So here is mine.

My husband, Dr. Chisholm, and I still reside in Griswold where he has practiced medicine for almost 40 years.

We spent several months in California this winter visiting relatives and friends. Seven years ago, we spent the winter in California and found it so delightful we decided to try it again soon, but the war put a stop to our plans.

I saw Cora Learned McLeod, B.Di. '95, at the Iowa Picnic, March 16. She and I both roomed at Charles Wiler Hall in the days of long ago.

While we were in California we were visited by Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Hicks (Elsie Arnold, B.Di. '94) and Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Henderson (Nettie Arnold, B.Di. '96). Mr. Hicks retired from his position at the North Dakota State Teachers College last year. He and Mrs. Hicks are now located in Portland, Ore. Mr. and Mrs. Henderson have lived in Portland for a number of years.—Mrs. Belle Hayes Chisholm, B.Di. '96.

Debaters Win Honors

Teachers College students won honors in two intercollegiate speech conferences this year.

Bill Birenbaum of Waterloo received the coveted superior rating in debate at the Rocky Mountain Speech Conference in Denver, Colo., in February. He was also given the second highest rating, excellent, in the oratory contest in which 31 students participated.

Jean Jungen of Waterloo received the highest award in the after dinner speaking contest at the Iowa Forensic League tournament at Coe College in March. She also received the rating of excellent in the debate contest.

Others receiving the excellent rating in debate were Bruce McQuigg of Schaller, Virginia Read of Waterloo, and Cay Cashman of Sioux Falls, S. D. Dorothy Sipple of Mt. Vernon received superior rating in poetry reading and in radio, and Joyce Bertness of Sioux City received an excellent rating in discussion.

Panther Coaches Attend Clinic

Two members of the Teachers College athletic department, football coach Clyde L. Starbeck, and track coach Arthur D. Dickinson, will be on the program of the sixth annual summer coaching school and officials' clinic. The five-day meeting will be in Spirit Lake from August 19 to 23 inclusive.

"Well Done," Says Navy

A special "Mark of Commendation" for effective cooperation with the United States Navy in the training of members of the Women's Reserve was awarded the Teachers College in April.

President Malcolm Price received a letter from Secretary Forrestal expressing appreciation for the "whole-hearted cooperation of your administration and the excellence of your facilities which contributed materially to the success of the Women's Reserve program."

The Teachers College was headquarters from December, 1942, to April 28, 1945, for the United States Naval Training School for WAVES. Approximately 1,000 were housed regularly in Bartlett Hall for the training program.

At first, the Teachers College served as one of the original "boot" camps and later was changed to a school for yeomen. In addition to housing and feeding of enlistees, the college made available facilities for the instructional program, including the use of the physical education plant and classrooms for instructional work.

"It is with genuine pride," wrote Secretary Forrestal, "that I present to your institution this certificate, a tangible sign of the Navy's appreciation for the task which Iowa State Teachers College has performed. In closing, may I add the Navy's traditional phrase of approval, a hearty 'Well done.'"
