A. Explanation of the Project and Reasons for Selection

This thesis produced a branded cross-media campaign for the UNI Recreation Services department. A brand, or visual identity, was needed to tie together all of the promotional materials being produced for Recreation Services. Before I created the brand, the department's materials did not have a consistent visual style, and each program within the department maintained its own materials. As a result, visitors who came to the department office often left with a handful of visually inconsistent printed materials. Additionally, print materials often needed to incorporate large areas of purple and gold in order to stay within guidelines set by University Relations. While these guidelines did create visual consistency with the brand of the university as a whole, the department's promotional materials did not stand out from the materials of any other department on campus. I also wanted to take on the brand as an exercise to ready myself as a professional graphic designer. As with many brands, UNI's overall (or "parent") brand has several visual guidelines, and I wanted to take on the creative challenge to design something fresh and new but that was still acceptable within the parent brand.

Furthermore, Recreation Services is housed in the Wellness/Recreation Center (WRC), and I wanted to complement the existing visual and relational experiences found in the WRC. The facility is visited by prospective students and their families and is also widely used by campus students, faculty, staff, and retirees as well as community members. I believed the scope of the project was sufficiently broad in that it could influence a large number of people to visit, work out, and make friends at the WRC. This project also fulfilled my two personal criteria: that it be meaningful, both to me personally in gaining skills and creating a full-scale brand, which in turn will look good to a future employer, and that it help people by encouraging students, faculty, and staff to work out and choose healthy lifestyles. Additionally, I set out to design print and web pieces for production, which would allow me to utilize both of my majors in graphic design and graphic technologies. Ultimately, I wanted to create excellent, cohesive, and functional design for a variety of applications.

To accomplish these goals, I created a brand for Recreation Services. A brand is made of three components: a look, a feel, and a message. The brand I created for Recreation Services looks athletic and well-executed, feels welcoming, and its message encourages the UNI community to participate in the recreational activities that it offers. Throughout the campaign, I created, updated, and branded program catalogs, indoor and outdoor signage, handouts, posters, annual reports, and other assorted printed collateral (branded promotional material). I also created a document of brand standards and best practices to guide the brand after I graduate and trained my future replacement in these standards, which will be applied to future print and web media. Last, I planned a cross-media strategy to promote the Recreation Services department in the future.

The campaign addressed the current lack of cohesive collateral created for recreation facilities on college campuses and resolved the deficit previously found on UNI's campus. Now that the branding campaign has been launched, it will join the body of contemporaneous branding campaigns and may inspire or even influence the work of future graphic designers, particularly if they aim to brand collegiate recreation departments.

B. Steps Taken to Complete the Project
I followed a set list of tasks throughout the past summer, fall and spring semesters to complete my thesis. During the fall, I first and foremost decided to expand upon the work I was currently doing for the WRC and take it to a new and professional level. Around the time I started thinking about my thesis topic, I was tasked with creating an all-program catalog. The purpose of the catalog was to bring together the eight programs offered by Recreation Services in a single 16-page publication which also described policies, hours of operation, and contact information for each of the program coordinators. Typically, branding campaigns start with intense research and identify consumer beliefs and values related to the brand. However, I did not have this information to draw upon, and so I went on to the next phase: brainstorming. I met with two program coordinators and gathered ideas and information that they wanted to include in the all-program catalog. The all-program catalog later became the foundation for the brand, as it shows the typography and photography treatments that other collateral was based upon. Soon after, I met with my supervisor and the director of the WRC, Christopher Denison, to pitch the idea of the catalog. He provided me with an example of another collegiate recreation department’s catalog, and we discussed project specifications as well as the types of information that would be gathered in the catalog. With his support, I continued to gather information from program coordinators, design increasingly more complete drafts, and talk through revisions with staff. I sent the final files to the printer on August 10, 2015, marking the first big milestone in my thesis.

As I worked on the all-program catalog, I also reached out to my academic advisor and graphic design professor, Roy Behrens, to ask if he would be my thesis advisor. He graciously agreed, and I began to send him bi-weekly updates to inform him of my progress. Throughout the entire process, he served as a sounding board for my ideas and was also an excellent cheerleader, and I am incredibly grateful for his help. After securing Roy’s help, I continued to apply the brand created in the all-program catalog to other collateral, including posters for Outdoor Recreation and tri-fold display panels for the Fitness program. I also wrote my thesis proposal, which included a statement of purpose, a review of material related to my topic, central themes I wanted to address, and a timeline of events.

Throughout the fall and spring semesters, I soon found roadblocks that prevented me from accomplishing my original plan. Of all the components included in my proposal, perhaps the most ambitious was my timeline. As I set out to implement my timeline in the spring semester, I quickly realized that I had outlined a media plan that could easily require a full-time graphic designer. I scaled back my plans to fulfill the projects required of me rather than taking on the new tasks I had hoped to accomplish in my media plan. Secondly, the projects I worked on depended on the direction of my supervisor, which meant that I might need to add or subtract jobs from my list at any point. As an example, one of these projects was a set of wall panels I designed for the Intramurals program. These were hung outside the Intramurals office and became a point of interest as well as a wayfinding device. Although I didn't originally anticipate designing these panels, they provided an excellent opportunity for me to create large-scale indoor signage. Third, my supervisor graciously allowed me to hire a new graphic design student to become my protégé and later become my replacement. However, after teaching her about the brand through extensive training sessions, I learned that she would not be able to continue the position. Unfortunately, the time I spent training her subtracted from my work hours. However, it was also a valuable learning opportunity for me, as this was the first time I had formally trained someone in the requirements of a job and handled giving and retracting responsibilities.

I also came across other projects in the fall semester that I did not anticipate. The executive director of Health and Recreation Services, Shelley O'Connell, was impressed with my work on the all-program catalog and asked if I would design annual reports for the Student Health Clinic, Recreation Services, and the Counseling Center. Therefore, much of my time throughout the fall semester was spent designing the reports for the Student Health Clinic and for Recreation Services. Although these projects were not in my original timeline, they were valuable opportunities to network and to create publications, which I enjoy creating most out of all of the projects I design. In the case of the Recreation Services annual report, I was also able to create a publication that diverged a bit from the brand I created for general Recreation Services promotional material. While the latter was meant to be appealing and exciting, the former was meant to provide information to university stakeholders and the Iowa Board of Regents. Designing for these two very different audiences within the same brand presented a new challenge and called for a different visual solution than the one I previously invented. However, I still needed to present several types of information in an interesting manner, which was the same task I completed with the all-program catalog. I completed the Student Health Clinic annual report on October 30, 2015 and the Recreation Services annual report on January 29, 2016.

Near the end of January, my supervisor and I hired another student to become my protégé and future replacement. Since then, Megan Parisot, a junior graphic design student, has been assisting me with my workload. I have addressed training much differently with Megan than with our previous student, as I am training Megan as we tackle projects along the way rather than all at once at the beginning. Although I initially planned to spend the spring semester designing emailed newsletters and digital publications and updating website information and social media content, I am grateful that I have been able to spend that time investing in Megan as a designer and preparing her to take on the position after I graduate. During this time, I have learned not only to continue creating pieces that are "on-brand," but also how to train and manage a protégé.

After finishing the Recreation Services annual report, I started working on the Counseling Center annual report. However, my supervisor requested a set of hallway panels to hang as indoor signage in the main hallways of the WRC, and so I began working on that task. I previously created the set of panels for Intramurals in the fall, and the majority of the 19 panels he requested for Recreation Services and Student Wellness Services would follow a somewhat similar visual scheme. I allotted the Recreation Services panels to Megan and took on the panels for Student Wellness Services myself, coaching Megan through many small critiques along the way. The panels and the Counseling Center annual report will be finished by the time I graduate at the end of this semester.

C. Description of Final Work
The elements of the thesis will be compiled in a portfolio that includes publications such as all-program catalogs and annual reports, collateral such as handouts, posters, and table tents, and copies of indoor signage such as the hallway panels I created for Recreation Services and Student Wellness services. Digital copies of portfolio pieces will also be included inside the portfolio in PDF format on a DVD disk. This portfolio may remain in the Honors office after I have left UNI and will be permanently available to allow others to view it. The products of this thesis will also reside in my printed and online portfolios for future employers and fellow graphic designers to access.

D. Assessment of the Importance of the Creative/Performative Activity and an Indication of the Activity's Unique Contribution to Existing Creative/Performative Works
Creating a brand for Recreation Services was extremely important because it set the department apart from other departments on campus and from the promotional materials for other schools. Not only does it elevate the position and importance of Recreation Services at UNI, it also elevates UNI as a whole when students, staff, or faculty from other colleges view the brand. My branded publications showed consistent systems of typography, color, image treatment, and placement of graphic elements. Brand elements, such as UNI’s logo, were also repeated throughout the publication. Altogether, a reader could easily pick up the publication, know which university was being represented, become more intrigued in the programs because of the appealing design, and have an enjoyable viewing experience, all of which likely increased participation or retention rates in Recreation Services activities in the past year. In addition, the branding I created will ultimately fuel increased recreational interaction in the future.

Last fall, I reviewed ten publications from colleges throughout the United States as samples of similar marketing efforts for recreational facilities and activities. Using the knowledge of branding I gained throughout my literature review as well as my own personal judgment as a graphic designer, I determined these publications to be either branded or not branded. Branded publications followed the guidelines outlined in the paragraph above. Unbranded publications, however, were often missing some of these elements or combined them in visually unpleasing ways. Unbranded publications typically use a wide variety of fonts and colors and place design elements, such as a block of text, in seemingly arbitrary locations. A reader who glanced through an unbranded publication would likely experience some confusion because of the general inconsistency in design and placement from page to page. As a result, a reader of an unbranded publication is less likely to have an enjoyable viewing experience and may also be less likely to participate in the activities being featured.

Of the publications I reviewed, four were branded and well executed throughout their imagery, typesetting, and overall cohesion. In these publications, images showed college students enjoying fitness facilities and working out in various recreational programs. Typesetting was consistent across headers, body copy, and captions. Overall, the pages of the publications seemed cohesive and the viewer had a consistent visual experience throughout. However, the remaining six publications were not branded. These publications were not well executed in design, imagery, typesetting, or overall cohesion. Instead, images and type were stacked unattractively or styled in unappealing colors. Some publications used only one color for monotone photography and set text only in black. Others were partially black and white publications, with some spreads printed in color. Information was not displayed in an orderly manner, and the overall viewing experience was neither enjoyable nor engaging.

As a result of the source review, and by learning from its important lessons, I can confidently say that I have created a branded all-program catalog—and a brand—for UNI Recreation Services. Both of these fill and inform the gap in excellent graphic design that is lacking in the promotion of many collegiate recreation programs. Thus, by creating a brand for Recreation Services and implementing it through the all-program catalog, I have added my own unique contribution to existing creative works.

E. Brief Statement About the Value of My Experience
I learned numerous lessons while completing this thesis. I have worked with a wide variety of clients, worked through university bureaucracy, policies, and restrictions, and, through my design choices, have consolidated the opinions of many. I created a fresh brand that fully meets the criteria of the UNI parent brand, and I applied the Recreation Services brand to a wide variety of products. I learned about branding, leadership, management, and passing my vision to another design student. Last, but certainly not least, I completed a project that was meaningful and important to me. This brand has real value for me, but it also has real value in the real world, certainly enough to become the new face of Recreation Services. I have learned so much through this experience, and I know that I will be able to take these skills forward to my professional graphic design career.

A MESSAGE FROM THE DIRECTOR

UNI Recreation Services plays an important role in the lives of students, faculty, staff, and the UNI community. Recent research shows that students who frequent collegiate recreation centers improve time management skills, develop friendships, and have higher GPAs. Recreation Services strives to help the UNI community through programs which address one’s health, wellness, and recreation needs. We complete this through a comprehensive collegiate recreation program including: aquatics, certifications, fitness, intramurals, outdoor recreation, sport clubs, and youth programs. I hope that you find information about your desired programs in this publication. If you have questions, I urge you to reach out to one of our staff via phone, email, social media, or by stopping by the main office at WRC 101.

ALUMNI SERVICES

UNI alumni are eligible to pay the WRC user fee for access to the WRC and Health Beat (in Maucker Union). UNI alumni may purchase one day passes, a six-day pass punch card, or pay the annual fee. For an additional fee, other programs and services are available. COMMUNITY SERVICES

UNI’s WRC supports the academic programs of the School of Health, Physical Education and Leisure Services (HPELS) and meets the recreational needs of students who pay a mandatory recreation fee. The facility has a very high rate of use and is challenged to meet all of the current on-campus demand, making it impractical to expand access to the general public. However, Recreation Services is able to offer certain opportunities for community members in the Cedar Valley to use the WRC through specific programs.

A trip to the Galápagos Islands will be the journey of your lifetime! Located 600 miles from the Ecuadorian mainland, the Galápagos Islands amaze the senses with huge biological diversity both terrestrially and aquatically. Isolated for thousands of years, some of the most unusual species in the world evolved here, including giant tortoises, marine iguanas, blue-footed boobies, and the world’s only equatorial penguins. The Islands comprise the Galápagos National Park and were recently named a World Heritage Site. Nearly all uninhabited, these islands can only be visited with a certified naturalist guide. With UNI Outdoors you will experience the Islands by hiking and snorkeling in the clear water surrounding them. This is best accomplished by living aboard a small, motor-powered ship so that we can transfer from one site to another quickly and, in some cases, while we are sleeping. Included are three nights in Quito, airfare from Quito to Galápagos, four nights and five days of lodging/meals on a charter boat, Galápagos activities, a national park fee, and a certified naturalist guide.

There are several factors to take into consideration when forming a new sport club such as gaining interest, start-up costs, practice location, etc. A sport club must have student officers and a UNI faculty/staff member as an advisor. You may begin the process of starting a new club by submitting a UNI sport club creator form and by setting up a meeting with the UNI sport club coordinator.

Recent research shows that students who frequent collegiate recreation centers improve time management skills, develop friendships, and have higher GPAs. Recreation Services strives to help the UNI community through programs which address one’s health, wellness, and recreation needs. We complete this through a comprehensive collegiate recreation program including: aquatics, certifications, fitness, intramurals, outdoor recreation, sport clubs, and youth programs. I hope that you find information about your desired programs in this publication. Galápagos Adventure
Location: Galápagos National Park
Date: May 20 – 27, 2016
Pre-Trip Meeting: March 7 at 6pm
Limit: 14
Cost: Student $3,300*, University $3,350*, Guest $3,400*
*Price does not include airfare to Quito, Ecuador

A trip to the Galápagos Islands will be the journey of your lifetime! Located 600 miles from the Ecuadorian mainland, the Galápagos Islands amaze the senses with huge biological diversity both terrestrially and aquatically.

Isolated for thousands of years, some of the most unusual species in the world evolved here, including giant tortoises, marine iguanas, blue-footed boobies, and the world’s only equatorial penguins. The Islands comprise the Galápagos National Park and were recently named a World Heritage Site. Nearly completely uninhabited, the islands can only be visited with a certified naturalist guide.

With UNI Outdoors you will experience the Islands by hiking and snorkeling in the clear water surrounding them. This is best accomplished by living aboard a small, motor-powered ship so that we can transfer from one site to another quickly and, in some cases, while we are sleeping.

Included with the trip are three nights in Quito, airfare from Quito to Galápagos, four nights and five days of lodging/meals on a charter boat, Galápagos activities, a national park fee, and a certified naturalist guide.

Start a Club

Any student may form a new sport club if there is sufficient student interest/participation in the sport or physical activity. There are several factors to take into consideration when forming a new sport club such as gaining interest, start-up costs, practice location, etc. A sport club must have student officers and a UNI faculty/staff member as an advisor. You may begin the process of starting a new club by submitting a UNI sport club creator form and by setting up a meeting with the UNI sport club coordinator.

Registration

If you are interested in joining an established club, go to www.uni.edu/forms/scf/join. To see the list of current sport clubs with links to their website or Facebook page, click on the Current Sport Clubs tab at www.uni.edu/recreation/sport_clubs.

The state-of-the-art Wellness/Recreation Center (WRC) offers you a wide range of drop-in recreation and fitness opportunities with multi-purpose areas, racquetball courts, fitness areas, indoor track, free weight room, climbing wall, lap and leisure pools, saunas, and lounge areas with table tennis tables. Equipment is available to check out, rent, or purchase. Outdoor facilities include multipurpose play fields, tennis courts, and an all-weather competitive track.
Thank you for reviewing the 2014–2015 UNI Recreation Services annual report. This report will provide a snapshot of facility use and program participation as well as departmental governance. We hope that you find this report informative. Recreation Services facilities and programs continue to be a hub of student action and a campus leader in sustainability efforts, cultural interaction, and recruitment and retention. Recent national research has shown the importance of campus recreation programs and the services they provide to students, faculty, and staff on college and university campuses. Specific benefits reported by participants include increased time management skills, respect for others, sense of belonging, ability to multitask, friendship development, problem solving skills, and communication. Additionally, student recreation center users report higher GPAs than the general student population.

Recreation Services employs over 280 student employees in a number of different types of jobs. Many of these roles are in direct support of customer satisfaction, program delivery, and risk management. The benefits of student employment go far beyond earning a paycheck. We employ learning outcomes that help students reflect on their positions and the value these jobs add to classroom learning. Specific learning outcome categories reviewed with students include critical thinking, decision making, teamwork, service orientation, civic engagement, interpersonal competence, intrapersonal competence, leadership, appreciation of differences, humanitarianism, and tolerance of ambiguity. We strongly believe that all of these areas will be important in post-graduation employment.

Continued collaborations with the School of Health, Physical Education and Leisure Services, UNI Athletics, Cedar Falls School District, and the City of Cedar Falls have proven to be very beneficial to all groups and the citizens of the state of Iowa. These collaborations combine and maximize resources and have led to efficient facility scheduling.

We welcome your feedback and look forward to continuing to serve the UNI community. If you have questions about Recreation Services programs or this annual report, please feel free to contact me or one of our staff.

Sincerely,

Christopher B. Denison, Ed.D.
Recreation Services Director

The Recreation Services budget of $1.8 million reflects three categories including the General Education Fund, Recreation Fee and program revenue.

In 2015, the mandatory student recreation fee was $68. The recreation fee supports the programming and operations of the comprehensive collegiate recreation program for the entire campus population. The programs include aquatics and certifications, group fitness, personal training, intramurals, sport clubs and youth programs, and outdoor recreation.

Recreation Services also maintains an Improvements and Renewals account as well as a UNI Foundation account, both of which are used for special projects. These special projects include facility construction and renovation, specialized equipment purchase, and staff professional development.

The Recreation Services Student Advisory Board is made up of a diverse group of UNI students, both undergraduate and graduate, representing a variety of student constituencies. The advisory board meets on a regular basis each semester to discuss WRC facility policies and Recreation Services programs and services.

It is the mission of the board to provide Recreation Services with input, feedback, and suggestions contingent on each student’s respective constituency. This information helps Recreation Services meet the ever-changing needs and interests of the UNI student body.

The mission of Recreation Services is to enhance the personal, professional, and academic lives of university students, faculty, and staff through structured and self-directed activities, educational programs and services, skill and leadership building activities, and campus-wide initiatives. Recreation Services staff are committed to being the leaders in fostering healthy lifestyles among members of the UNI campus community.

Recreation Services is a department within UNI Health and Recreation Services (HRS). HRS is a department within the Division of Student Affairs.

280 STUDENT EMPLOYEES
AQUATICS & CERTIFICATIONS

Teaching life-saving skills to hundreds of students, faculty, and staff in the WRC natatorium

Program Coordinator: Rachel Cook
Contact: rachel.cook@uni.edu

Aquatics and certifications Coordinator Rachel Cook was featured within Campus Rec Magazine in 2015. In the article, Cook shared insights and advice on how to run a successful aquatics and certifications program.

The purpose of the Aquatics program is to provide opportunities for aquatic-related fitness and life-saving certifications. The Aquatics program also serves the UNI community through the Paddling Panthers learn-to-swim program and the Master’s Swim program.

The aquatics program has a sustained history of preparing graduates for work in the aquatic industry. A unique relationship with the School of Health, Physical Education and Leisure Services allows students to receive a certificate in aquatic management through classroom learning that is further enhanced with out of class work in the Recreation Services Aquatics program.

GROUP FITNESS

Offering 70+ sections of fitness classes and events during the spring, summer, and fall semesters

Program Coordinator: Dana Foster
Contact: dana.foster@uni.edu

The Group Fitness program boasts a comprehensive offering of over 70 courses each semester. Types of classes include cardio, water, strength and conditioning, mind and body, specialty, and special events. The program also includes exercise incentives and fitness events for kids.

The 70-plus sections are offered between 6-8am, over the noon hour, and between 3-10pm. Some of the more popular classes are offered multiple times per day, providing students, faculty, and staff with flexibility in their fitness routine.

Six instructor-level certifications are also available in the group fitness program. Instructor-level certifications allow students to match in-classroom information with out of class certification and practical work as group fitness instructors.

PERSONAL TRAINING

Training the campus community to become motivated, use equipment properly, and reach personal fitness goals

Program Coordinator: Kristy Leen
Contact: kristy.leen@uni.edu

The personal trainer certification course is an excellent way for students to use the knowledge they have gained from the classroom and to apply those skills to meet a client’s goals.

The Personal Training program allows participants to work one-on-one with a Personal Trainer. Personal Trainers focus on education, motivation, and exercise adherence to help clients enjoy the lifelong benefits of regular physical activity. Hallmarks of the program include a pre-training assessment, 10 one-hour sessions, and a post-training assessment. Sessions are geared toward client goals.

Clients usually participate to manage injuries or to become oriented to fitness equipment. Clients also participate in this program to learn new techniques and workout routines.
In addition to our vast numbers of structured activities, the Wellness/Recreation Center offers many non-structured opportunities as well. These include drop-in use of the fitness center, free weight room, leisure and lap pools, climbing wall, racquetball courts, and the gymnasiums. Additionally, the Health Beat in Maucker Union is a heavily used drop-in fitness center. Informal recreation and drop-in use accounts for the vast majority of yearly participation.

Program Coordinator: Cynthia Klatt
Contact: cynthia.klatt@uni.edu

The purpose of the Intramural program is to provide students with a variety of short-term, competitive activities in single, dual, and team formats. Like sport clubs, leadership opportunities exist for students who would like to be their team’s manager, officiate contests, or become an Intramural Supervisor.

The Intramural program offers a wide range of up to 40 activities including softball, flag football, volleyball, basketball, dodgeball, soccer, swimming, pickleball, racquetball, bench press, golf, badminton and many more. UNI continues to be one of few institutions offering intramural wrestling.

Although most Intramural participation occurs on campus, statewide, regional, and national tournaments are available for campus champions in flag football and basketball.

SPORT CLUBS & YOUTH PROGRAMS

JOINING STUDENTS TOGETHER
through common sports, activities, and interests
Program Coordinator: Joelle Rummel
Contact: joelle.rummel@uni.edu

The purpose of the Sport Club program is to provide opportunities for students based on their sport aspirations. Club organization, grassroots recruitment, development of club bylaws, and governance are hallmarks of the sport club program. Throughout 2014 – 2015, 25 sport clubs were active. Clubs typically practice twice a week and invite other institutions to compete. Competitions take place at UNI or the teams will travel to compete.

The purpose of the Youth Program is to provide community-wide youth programming. The anchor program is the Spring Break All-Sports Camp. The week-long camp provides swimming and climbing opportunities as well as at least four different sport programs each day. Parents refer to the program as PE all day. The leisure pool and climbing wall provide programming options that are unique to the Wellness/Recreation Center. Babysitting classes, outdoor adventure camp, climbing camp, and junior lifesaving round out current Youth Program offerings.

OUTDOOR RECREATION

through adventure trips, skill clinics, and safety courses
Program Coordinator: Andrew Martin, Ed.D.
Contact: andrew.martin@uni.edu

The purpose of the Outdoor Recreation program is to provide outdoor and environmental education and opportunities for students, faculty, and staff. The Outdoor Recreation program is committed to providing enjoyable, challenging, meaningful, and educational experiences that will allow individuals and groups to learn the skills necessary for survival and safety in outdoor activities as well as develop an appreciation for the environment.

The UNI Outdoors program encompasses three main functions, including managing the climbing wall, organizing and guiding adventure trips, and providing equipment rental. UNI Outdoors uses four main facilities, including the WRC climbing wall, the WRC Outdoor Recreation Center, the north pond, and the west campus soft trail. The adventure trips program also uses public and private lands all over the United States and travels to one foreign country each year.

UNI hosted Wartburg College and Hawkeye Community College in a three-way flag football tournament held in the UNI-Dome.

UNI Tae Kwon-Do club, the oldest collegiate traditional tae kwon-do club in America, participated in the 44th Promotional Testing.
