AND THE WIND BLEW FIERCELY

by C.J. Bacino

1987 Senior, Marshalltown, Iowa, Senior High
Student in Environmental Science

And the wind blew fiercely
over a land that never was.
A red sky dusts the cracked eyes of a mother.
Who, with bone arms,
holds a bloated child.

And the wind blew fiercely
A dry well stands alone,
its bucket begging
Like the rigid man who breaks when he moves.

And the wind blew fiercely
Empty bowls stand without majesty and in rot.
Water is finally to come,
But not to quench a thirst.

Tears from a bone-armed mother who holds a still child
Over a land that never was.
