Offensive Materials Statement: Materials located in UNI ScholarWorks come from a broad range of sources and time periods. Some of these materials may contain offensive stereotypes, ideas, visuals, or language.

This unexpected but happy marriage of an academician with a chemical industry was made possible originally by a grant from the National Science Foundation. Subsequent work on the project has been supported by the Shell Development Company and not only has this resulted in benefits for Shell but it has also added a dimension to the author's research interest that could not have come in any other way.

It is quite rewarding when one finds his efforts to be of use, even if these efforts were made merely for the joy of discovery.

Two New NSTA Publications

The following publications were recently introduced at the 25th Annual National Science Teachers Association's Convention held in Cincinnati.

Hunger: The World Food Crisis ($2.50), an annotated bibliography by Kathryn Mervine Fowler, contains reviews of publications, lists of curriculum materials, films, and organizations involved in food and hunger issues. Produced under a grant from the U.S. Office of Environmental Education, Hunger: The World Food Crisis was developed to facilitate the introduction of food topics into the K-12 classroom.

Games for the Science Classroom ($3.75), by Paul B. Hounshell and Ira R. Trollinger, has been designed to enhance the learning environment through the use of instructional games. Containing all the information necessary for choosing, ordering, and preparing over 100 games in the biological, physical, earth/space, and general sciences, this guide also includes a brief summary of their rules.

Both publications may be ordered directly from NSTA; write: National Science Teachers Association, 1742 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009. All orders must be prepaid except those on official purchase order forms. Add 50 cents postage and handling on all prepaid orders. Shipping and handling charges will be added to all billed purchase orders.
