SOLEIL D'OR, THE PROGENITOR OF GOLDEN COLORED ROSES*

CLARK D. PARIS AND T. J. MANEY

In 1900 when Monsieur J. Pernet-Ducher introduced a new yellow rose, a seedling of Persian Yellow pollinated by Antoine Ducher, and named it Soleil d'Or, he little realized the magical color combinations that this one variety was destined to transmit to the succeeding generations of hybrid tea roses. From the introduction of La France in 1867 until 1900, there were no true yellow hybrid teas. During this period the Noisette Marechal Niel fulfilled the need for a yellow rose. Needless to say, Soleil d'Or soon became very popular both as a garden subject and as a source of new blood in hybridization. The popularity of this one rose in breeding work is attested by the fact that the Pernetiana class was erected to include this group, but as the number of hybrids increased, the line of demarcation between hybrid teas and pernetianas disappeared until there is now a tendency to designate all of them hybrid teas.

An intensive study of the roses introduced from 1900 to 1943 has revealed that 513 roses of known parentage can be traced to Soleil d'Or. Of this number 407 are seedlings and 106 are sports. As the parentage of new varieties is not always given, one can only conjecture what the grand total should be. In Table I the seedling descendants of Soleil d'Or are listed with their parentage. The parent with Soleil d'Or blood is designated by an asterisk (*). Table II lists the sports.

Table I. Named varieties which are direct descendants of Soleil d'Or.
